WILL NOT CONFER WITH LABOR LEADERS, HE SAYS

ACCEPT 22 AS NEW POLICE

Another Group Takes Final Tests and 15 New Applications Are Received

Twenty-two men who were on the Civil Service list of August 8 were sworn in as members of the Boston police force today and will report for duty within a short time.

Another group from the same list, examined by Commissioner Curtis and Superintendent Crowley in the Grand Jury room at the courthouse, will be sworn in if accepted. These men are not war veterans.

At Kingsley Hall up to noon fifteen men had applied for admission to the department, and of these eleven were passed up the preliminary board and sent to the offices of the Civil Service Commission.

President Michael J. O'Donnell of the Boston Central Labor Union said today:

"It is up to Mr. Storrow to make public the report of the Mayor's Committee of Thirty-Four. The newspapers should insist that this report be published. Undoubtedly something important will be decided upon at the meeting of the C. L. U. Sunday, one of the most important in its history."

Cincinnati, O., Oct. 1.—A heavy mist that hung over the city early today cleared before noon and everything pointed to an ideal day for the opening of the World's Series games between the Chicago White Sox and the Reds. It was estimated that 38,000 fans would be on hand.

Speculation regarding the pitchers continued, despite the fact that Pat Moran announced Reuther as his choice and Kid Gleason hinted Cicotte would shoulder the burden of turning back the Red tide.

People in Cincinnati are wild about the Reds but they aren't wild enough to let that influence their financial judgment. You'd think that the Redlegs would be even money in the betting here, but such does not at all happen to be the case. The White Sox are being quoted at 10 to 8 and 10 to 7 and not many takers at that.

It isn't going to be much of a gambling series from the lookout

GUNMEN HOLD UP WATCHMAN; LOOT TILL

Cut Phone Wire in Watertown Garage and Escape in Auto No. 148,665

Two armed men entered Morgan's Garage at Prentiss street, in the Mt. Auburn section of Watertown, early today, and held up at the point of a revolver the night watchman, Frank C. Bellis, of Cambridge. While one man covered Bellis with a revolver, the other rifled the cash drawer of its contents—$7. The robber then searched the place for more money, but did not find any. The two escaped in an auto, number 148,665, in the direction of Boston.

Before entering the garage the men cut a telephone wire. There happened to be two telephones, however, so the watchman reached the police with the second, after the thieves had gone.

The men are described as between twenty-five and twenty-seven years of age, and dressed in dark clothes and caps.

WILD AUTO RUNSDOWN 2 WOMEN

Leaps Onto Sidewalk at No. 517 Washington Street, Crashes Through Window

An automobile, out of control, mounted the sidewalk in front of No. 517 Washington street early today, ran down and severely injured two business women on their way to work and crashed through the show window of the Boston Baggage Company.

The women are: Miss Mary E. Ackerly of No. 2 St. Paul street, Cambridge, and Mrs. Albert Redmond of Greenville avenue, Needham. Both are employed in an insurance office at No. 96 Milk street.

Miss Ackerly is the more seriously injured. After knocking her down the car passed over her body, bruising and wounding her left hip, the shoulders and arms. It is also believed that she was injured internally.

Mrs. Redmond became hysterical and was unable at first to tell the extent of her injuries.

The car, a small sedan, was driven by Harold C. Millett of No. 26 Hemenway street. He says the steering gear broke when a front wheel struck a piece of ice in the gutter in front of the Boston Baggage Company, causing the car to leap onto the sidewalk.

POLICE SAY QUINN IS NOTORIOUS THIEF

James F. Quinn, arrested yesterday on the charge of stealing sample trunks containing clothing and furs valued at $20,000, was today said by the police to be a well-known criminal.

Quinn's photo was found to adorn the Rogue's Gallery under the name of Charles F. Phillips, alias John Leonard, alias Keating and Foley. The police say he defaulted $10,000 bail in the Superior Court last December, where he was under seven indictments charging the larceny of furs valued at $10,000 from Jackson & Company of Tremont street. Quinn is also wanted for the larceny of shoes which were recovered in Marlboro about the same time.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL PARKER MOVES OFFICE

Brigadier-General Samuel D. Parker, commander of the State Guards, Boston, today moved his office from police headquarters in Pemberton square to No. 32 Beacon street. All of the equipment used in directing the work of the guards men was moved to the new headquarters. The old quarters proved too small for the work.

TRAPPED IN FIRE, GIRL IS KILLED

Father, in Excitement as Block Burns at Indian Orchard, Thought Her Safe

Springfield, Oct. 1.—One girl was killed, a fireman overcome, and a number of persons carried down ladders to the street, when the Lyons Block in Indian Orchard, a suburb, was destroyed by fire today. The police estimate the loss at $12,000.

Miss Helen Andros, nineteen, daughter of Arthur Andros, proprietor of a candy store on the first floor of the block, was suffocated while her father was begging the firemen to recover $265 which he had left in the burning building.

FIREMAN MAY NOT LIVE.

Fireman John O'Connell was overcome by smoke and removed to the Lindsley Hospital where he is reported to be in a serious condition.

The block was an old three-story structure, formerly a hotel known as the Sulphur Springs House. For years it has been occupied as a combination business and tenement building, with stores on the first floor.

The blaze broke out in the basement, according to the police. Before it was discovered both stairways were cut off and the flames were roaring through the building. How it started is not known.

GIRL WAS IN ATTIC.

Miss Andros, whose home was in Chicopee, was sleeping in an attic room, while her father occupied a room in another part of the block. It was customary, the police said, for the couple to spend some of their nights in the building, in order that they might open the store early the next day.

Andros, with several other tenants, made his way to the roof and was taken to the street by firemen.

Henry Frappier, a member of the fire department, entered the building wearing a gas mask and found the body of the Andros girl, after her father had stated that she was all right. Physicians worked over the young woman with a pulmotor for an hour without success.

Wilson Again Upset by Failure to Get Sleep

Washington, Oct. 1.—"The President had a restless night and consequently is feeling somewhat jaded today," Rear Admiral Grayson, the President's personal physician, announced this afternoon.

It is understood that practically the only sleep the President had was after daylight.

Dr. Grayson was not discouraged, however, by the slight change in his patient's condition and expressed the belief that it was temporary. The sudden change in the weather, from mild and balmy to damp and raw, also was thought to have had its effect upon the President.

Holliston, Oct. 1.—Dennis Curran, fifty, a motorman, was instantly killed and six other persons injured today when a passenger express car of the Milford and Uxbridge Electric Railway Company collided with a sand car on a curve at Metcalf, one mile from Holliston Centre.

The injured are:

The passenger car was going from Framingham to Uxbridge, and the sand car was headed toward Framingham, scattering sand on the tracks.

DECLARES FIRMLY FOR OPEN SHOP

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 1.—Whether organized labor shall control industry is the "moral issue" in the steel strike, Judge Gary, chief executive officer of the United States Steel Corporation, declared this afternoon before the Senate labor committee investigating the steel strike.

"We stand firmly upon the proposition that industry must proceed without interference except from the employer, the employe or the government," Judge Gary said.

The steel strike is a struggle to determine whether organized labor can force a closed shop upon industry, Judge Gary asserted.

"The United States Steel Corporation will refuse to contract with the unions and will not confer with labor leaders," Judge Gary asserted.

Judge Gary stated the corporation will hear complaints of workers irrespective of whether they are union members however.

DEADLOCK OVER WILSON.

The investigation came to a sudden halt and a recess was taken when Judge Gary and Senator Kenyon came to a deadlock over the steps taken by President Wilson to intervene and prevent the steel strike. Judge Gary declined to state what had transpired between himself and President Wilson and would not answer the assertion of labor leaders that President Wilson asked him to meet with the union committee.

"Well, we will adjourn for lunch and think it over," Senator Kenyon said after Judge Gary had strongly insisted that any information concerning the President's action should come from the President."

The steel strike was forced by order of Labor—to force the organization of labor in the steel mills, in the view of Judge Gary. He declared in his statement to the committee that he was justified in refusing to meet

JUDGE GARY, BEFORE SENATORS, GIVES LIE TO STRIKE LEADERS

MISTREATMENT OF WORKERS EMPHATICALLY DENIED

John Fitzpatrick and other leaders because they did not represent the steel workers.

DENIES BRUTALITY CHARGES.

"They were rank outsiders," he declared.

Flat denial of charges of brutality and intimidation by the steel corporation was made by Judge Gary before leaders resorted to threats against the workers and their families to force them on strike, and many men stayed away from their work because of fear, he said.

"The strike is gradually breaking and more men are returning to work each day, said the steel magnate.

"There is no basic industry in the country or in the world which is paid larger wages to its employes than the U. S. Steel Corporation, or one that has treated its employes with greater respect and considerateness if as great," Gary said.

"More of the steel strikers are returning to work every day, more so than yesterday than on any day since the strike started," Judge Gary said.

He estimated that only 24 per cent of the steel workers wanted to strike. The number that had actually walked out might reach 40 per cent, but "the threats, intimidation and coercion leaders used on uneducated foreigners caused many to stay out because of fear of bodily violence," he said.

"The union leaders say we coerced their program, but if we did so it was because we treated our men well that they preferred to stand side the unions.

CHARGES INTIMIDATION.

"Intimidation and threats and coercion were employed by unions here to force the uneducated and timid of our workers into the unions. While evidence to show that threats were made to burn the homes of uneducated foreigners to frighten them into striking."

Judge Gary stated emphatically that the radical element among the steel strikers was a "small minority," most of the foreigners, as well as the American born, being loyal to the United States and its institutions. He said the lowest wage rate paid by the steel corporation and its subsidiaries was $4.5 a day, while the wage scale ran as high as $9.50 a day.

"The strike was inaugurated by the union leaders, not by the men," Judge Gary said. "The American Federation of Labor has been trying all these years to organize the men, the men have not been willing to join union organizations."

Judge Gary was accompanied by Senate committee hearing by E. Lindsbury, general counsel of the United States Steel Corporation; John Reis, vice president; James H. Bonner, manager of sales; W. J. Filbert, comptroller, and C. L. Close, manager of the Bureau of Safety, Sanitation and Welfare.

Senator Kenyon, opening the hearing, told Judge Gary that the committee desired to learn of the genesis of the strike.

GARY'S STATEMENT.

"I am chairman of the board of directors, chairman of the finance committee, and chief executive officer of the United States Steel Corporation, in charge of its affairs," said Judge Gary, opening his statement. He explained that the finance committee "is really the dominating factor in the corporation."

He then named the members of the finance committee.

"The finance committee is in very close contact with and actively interested in the affairs and policies of the corporation," Judge Gary said. "The policies are announced by the chairman.

"It has been well known for several years that the labor unions were attempting to organize the labor of the subsidiary companies of the U. S. Steel Corporation.

"It has been stated before this committee that the subsidiary companies of the Steel Corporation have been guilty of mistreatment of employes. That is absolutely without foundation.

"There is no basic industry in this country or in the world which has paid larger wages to its employes than the United States Steel Corporation, nor one that has treated its employes with greater respect.

DENIES ABUSING STRIKERS.

"It has been charged that during the impending strike the subsidiary companies have been guilty of attacking and mistreating strikers. That is entirely without foundation. There is not a vestige of truth in that statement."

Shown a photograph of a woman killed in a "coal miners" riot at Breckenridge, Pa., which had been introduced as evidence by John Fitzpatrick, leader of the steel strikers, when he appeared before the committee last week, Gary said neither the Steel Corporation nor any of its subsidiaries had any plants or employes at that town.

In disclaiming all responsibility for the riot or the woman's death on the part of the Steel Corporation, Gary said that its policy was to discourage outbreaks or affairs of that kind.

WOMAN KILLED IN RIOT.

"The trouble resulted," he said, "from mine workers employed by the Allegheny Coal & Coke Co., in which the corporation had no interest, attacking a mine with clubs, brickbats, guns and other weapons. The woman was shot death when the attack was in progress and deputy sheriffs fired on the mob.

"The Steel Corporation has no properties nor is it connected in any way with the community in which this woman unfortunately met her death."

It was a coal and not a steel strike which caused the trouble, he said, and the woman was killed several weeks before the steel strike commenced.

Gary read an affidavit made by a son of Jefferson Davis Pierce of Worcester, Mass., who Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, testified before the committee was bludgeoned to death by thugs employed by the Steel Corporation, to the effect that his father died from cancer caused by injuries inflicted by an I. W. W. "strong arm man."

"This strike has been conducted in many respects as many other strikes," Gary said.

"The large majority of our workers did not desire to strike. They were not members of any union. They had repeatedly declined to become members of such.

"During the war our workmen were loyal, efficient workmen and there was never any interruption of work during the war period.

"While there is a radical element, it is only just and fair to say that the majority of foreigners at work at our mills are good citizens and loyal to the United States and its institutions."

REMAIN ON PAYROLL.

"Do they remain on your payroll?" asked Senator Kenyon.

"I should think so," answered Judge Gary.

Judge Gary then took up in detail the case of Jefferson Davis Pierce, who, Fitzpatrick declared, had been bludgeoned to death for attempting to organize strikers.

"The son of this man," said Judge Gary, "swears an account of this testimony, brought to our office an affidavit which I shall read."

This affidavit, signed by Jefferson Davis Pierce, declared that he was with his father when he received his fatal injuries, and that he was not injured by an employe of the Steel Corporation, but by "an I. W. W. worker sent there to cause trouble." The affidavit continued: "I wish to refute Mr. Gompers' statement that my father's death was caused by the Steel Corporation."

Jefferson Davis Pierce, Jr., who made the affidavit, Judge Gary said, was connected with the American Steel & Wire Company of Worcester.

REPUDIATE GARY STRIKE.

Judge Gary said that the United States Steel Corporation had nothing to do with the strike at Gary, Ind., where men were killed during a riot. He said he understood that these deaths were due to a riot caused by an attack upon men who were attempting to resume their work.

"Our companies in no way were responsible," said Judge Gary.

Negro Gets 20-Year Term After Trial Lasting but Half an Hour in Jersey

By International News Service.

Camden, N. J., Oct. 1.—Jersey justice worked with lightning rapidity today, when James Whittingt, a negro, arrested yesterday for attacking Mrs. Mary Motzey, a white woman, at Merchantville, was sentenced to from 20 to 30 years imprisonment at hard labor at a special session of court.

Whittings was captured after being smoked out of a swamp where he had taken refuge from a band of armed white men.

To avoid mob vengeance the trial was rushed through with the utmost secrecy, and 30 minutes were taken up by the proceedings.

One minute after the verdict was rendered the prisoner was being speeded to the Trenton penitentiary in a high-powered automobile, accompanied by armed guards.

Whittings admitted that he had choked Mrs. Motzey, but denied that he had attempted any further physical violence. His testimony was disproved.

ALLIANCE ACTS TO END STRIKE IN ENGLAND

Conference Results in Sending a Committee to Deal With British Premier

By International News Service.

London, Oct. 1.—The first definite step towards a settlement of the National railway strike was taken this afternoon when it was decided at a conference of officials of the unions composing the Triple Alliance to send a deputation of eleven men to call upon Premier Lloyd George.

The delegates were instructed to attempt to obtain a pronouncement from the government on wages revision and to report to Caxton Hall where the conference is being held. Many unions, which are involved in the rail strike or may be involved, are represented.

NOT ACT OF RAILWAY MEN.

J. H. Thomas, executive secretary of the national union of railway men, issued an official statement saying that the visit was not being made at the instigation of the railway men.

Strong sentiment against the strike or any extension of it developed at the conference, the delegates, however, unanimously adopted a resolution declaring that they were convinced that the rail strike was purely a trade union strike for better wages and working conditions. This was regarded as an answer to the Premier's charge that it was an anarchist conspiracy.

NO GENERAL STRIKE LIKELY.

The Central News announced that it had learned from an authoritative source that they would be no general strike.

The government statement today says:

"Service continues to improve. Yesterday over 800 trains were operated, exclusive of the partial resumption on the underground system. More railway men have returned to work. Full arrangements have been made for substitutes in the event of any bus men leaving."

He thought he had hit a person, so turned, and in turning did hit a real policeman, who took him to court. Wilmarth appealed and was held in bonds of $200 for the Superior Court. It was his first offence.

SHIP WORKERS GIVE WILSON A CHANCE

Strike Put Off Until After Industrial Conference; Concessions Made

Washington, Oct. 1.—The nation-wide strike of shipyard workers threatened for today has been temporarily averted. The conferences yesterday between representatives of the fifteen international unions in the shipyards and officials of the Navy Department and the Emergency Fleet Corporation of the Shipping Board resulted in these two important steps:

1—Agreement by the government to remove the restrictions against granting the shipyard workers a working week of less than forty-eight hours.

This was one of the demands of the workers, and the concession by the government applies to all shipworkers.

2—The government representatives urged that the wage demands of the shipworkers be held in abeyance until after President Wilson's industrial conference.

James O'Connell, president of the metal trades department of the American Federation of Labor, said today that he thought that the workers would abide by the government wish.

FIFTEEN HARVARD GRADUATES GIVE $25,000 EACH TO AID FUND

LOWELL IS ONE OF GROUP

His Gift Is More Than Twice His Yearly Salary as Head of University

Before the subscription lists in the Harvard Endowment Fund drive were opened today, it was announced that fifteen Harvard graduates living in Boston had already made contributions of $25,000 each to the Greater Boston committee.

Among the number were A. Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard; Thomas W. Lund, class of 1896, and Eliot Wadsworth, class of 1898. The contributions entitle the donors to membership in the Harvard Endowment Fund "Twenty-five Thousand Dollar Club."

Optimism was the slogan of the local managers of the ten-day drive, as the teams started to work. Boston's proportionate share of the $15,000,000 sought is $5,000,000, and with a start of $375,000 from only fifteen subscribers before the drive was formally open it was felt that the city could not fail to "come through."

Henry S. Thompson, general manager of the Greater Boston committee, stated that the fifteen charter members of the "Twenty-Five Thousand Dollar Club" came forward voluntarily.

Thomas Nelson Perkins, chairman of the committee, was highly pleased with the start of the campaign, and predicted that when the teams began to report the results would be even more encouraging.

President Lowell's gift of $25,000 was particularly appreciated, as it represents a third and one-half times his yearly salary.

RIVALRY WITH NEW YORK.

Local workers were stirred to a friendly rivalry with New York, following reports that before the list was thrown open in that city, $1,000,000 was subscribed.

Today's complete results will not be known before tomorrow morning. It was stated at drive headquarters, No. 30 Milk street.

Eliot Wadsworth, chairman of the executive committee, was in Boston today and expressed confidence that Boston would retain its reputation for achievement in support of Harvard.

Robert E. Gardiner '03, chairman of the general committee for the Boston district, and in charge of the 1,000 workers in this territory, said that while the big gifts of early days of the drive could not go over unless those of more limited means subscribed.

21,000 IN DISTRICT.

The Greater Boston district comprises Suffolk, Norfolk and the southern half of Middlesex Counties. In this territory are 21,000 men who attended Harvard, and it is upon them that the campaign will ultimately depend.

University pride is being appealed to by the canvassers. The needs of Harvard are being emphasized, and the plight of poorly paid instructors and professors kept in the foreground.

VETERANS WATCHING EDUCATIONAL BILL

Boston ex-service men are much interested in the War Service Educational bill just introduced in the House by Congressman S. D. Fess of Ohio. This is the identical bill introduced in the Senate by Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin, and has the official support of the American Legion. It would guarantee nine months of educational or apprenticeship training at government expense for every veteran. It would also give the ex-service men compensation of $60 a month while at school.

U. S. to Ask Apology for Flogging of Soldier in Russia

Washington, D. C., Oct. 1.—An apology will be demanded by the State and War Departments from the Russian Government for the recapture of two American soldiers, one of whom was flogged, upon verification of reports received by Major-General William S. Graves in charge of the American forces in Siberia.

The two Americans, one an officer, were captured by Cossacks about 170 miles out of Vladivostok, where the soldier was flogged. The officer escaped. On returning to his command he organized a force to return but was met by a Japanese major who said that if he proceeded he would throw his troops with the Cossacks. The soldier was later found with the American forces.

SAYS 'BUCK' IS BEING PASSED AT INQUIRY

Chairman Fails to Get Definite Information in Probe of Port Hunter Wreck

Chairman C. P. Reavis, chairman of the House sub-committee investigating the salvaging of the wrecked steamer Port Hunter, referred to "passing the buck" and "closing the barn door after the horses is gone," at today's hearing in the Federal Building. The liner was sunk in a collision in Vineyard Sound, November 5, 1918.

Other members of the committee are Congressman McGregor of Buffalo and Donnan of New York. Witnesses today include Brigadier-General John W. Hickman, commanding the Coast Artillery district, and Major Michael J. Moore, adjutant-general of the Northeast Department.

Major Moore testified to an effort made to have agents of the Department of Justice attempt to recover some of the cargo which had been stolen after the ship was abandoned. The cargo was originally worth approximately $6,000,000. It is claimed that about $2,000,000 worth of it was taken by the looters.

General Hickman and Major Moore testified that they were informed of the sinking by telegram January 5, and were asked to take steps to prevent pilfering of the cargo. A guard was established about the ship at that time.

Congressman Reavis attempted to get Major Moore down to a definite statement as regards the identity of the man in the War Department who would be in a position to give out information regarding the sinking.

Major Moore replied that he did not care to make such a statement as it might be regarded as criticising the department.

It was during this testimony that Chairman Reavis made his assertion regarding the "buck" and "barn door."

EVERETT'S TAX RATE IS MADE $5 HIGHER

Everett's tax rate as announced by Columbus Corey, chairman of the Everett Board of Assessors, is $27.60, an increase of $5 over the tax rate of last year.

About $2 extra in the tax rate is for the assessment of $74,600 on the Elevated deficit imposed on the citizens. Further increases were made necessary to meet the higher State and county taxes.

Millions of socks were sewed for soldiers. Selection of being the first college "Sister Sue" goes to Miss Elsie Webster of the Cranford Club in Brattle square, Cambridge.

The Cranford Club is an institution conducted by Simmons College for undergraduates and their friends. Here meals may be secured at a reasonable cost, served by students clad in fetching costume.

Realizing the propensity of garments to wear and tear, it was decided to install a seamstress. This position is now being filled by Miss Webster, also fetchingly costumed, who spends her spare time sewing.

It is rumored that large numbers of Harvard men are anxiously investigating the condition of their socks in the hope that they will be permitted to patronize "Sister Susie."

W. G. ANDREW STILL SOMERVILLE RESIDENT

Boston American:

The story published in last Monday night's American, concerning my candidacy for the Republican nomination for executive councillor in the Fourth Councillor District, has, I feel, created a false and unjust impression. I was at the time of the primary, and still am, a resident of Somerville. The voters of Somerville were not deceived, much less were my supporters both in Cambridge and Somerville, who knew me.

This post-primary attempt to create a wrong impression by subtle innuendo seems to be an aftermath of plans which miscarried, much to the chagrin of some professional politicians who moved heaven and earth to make a clean field this year for the present councillor, George R. Wason, who heretofore has very slim support, succeeded in being unopposed at the primaries.

Callahan of the Superior Criminal Court. The jury was discharged immediately after the report.

Since April 22 of this year the crossing has been the scene of six fatal accidents and the deaths of five people. The jurors found "gross neglect of duty," inasmuch as no remedy was recommended when the fatalities were reported and the reports "went no further than the chief inspector."

BULLET PIERCES INSPECTOR'S HEART

Revengeful Liquor Smugglers Blamed in Vermont Tragedy

Island Pond, Vt., Oct. 1.—Revengeful liquor smugglers are believed to have murdered Ralph R. Flanders, United States Customs Inspector, who was mysteriously shot through the heart in the home of Captain E. A. Randall with the former's receiver.

Only a few hours before he was shot Flanders arrested a party of four men on the Canadian border in an automobile containing contraband whiskey. He was regarded as one of the most brilliant men in the customs service here and during the past month has apprehended, on three occasions, persons who attempted to smuggle liquor across the border.

The authorities investigating the case, sheriff E. A. Beamis of Island Pond and State's Attorney Clair H. Dr. Brooks spoke with emphasis on Forbes, are confident that Flanders' murderer can be found among the smugglers in this district who have been so active lately.

Although every inch of ground in the basement of the bedroom in the Randall home has been gone over no clues upon which the authorities can work have been unearthed. The weapon by which Flanders met his death was found with one cartridge discharged, a few inches from the body. Powder marks on the victim's coat indicated that the shot had been fired at close range.

Early yesterday morning Flanders was heard to cry out by Mrs. Randall who summoned her husband, also an inspector, and together they hurried to the room. Flanders was not yet dead, although unconscious with his body resting on the floor. Mrs. Randall went to summon a physician by telephone but when she returned he had died.

The autopsy performed by Drs. Bigham H. Stone and Charles P. Whitney of Burlington, it was evident, say the examiners, that he had not met death by accident, but that a special investigation board will be appointed to look into the case to determine officially the cause of death.

Flander's fellow customs inspectors scout the idea that the committed suicide and point to the fact that one window of the room in which he was found open onto a low roof in the back of the Randall house. This, it was shown, could be easily scaled.

The four men arrested by Flanders, assisted by inspector H. P. Belknap and C. H. Bryan, three alleged owners of the automobile, and John May, both of Coaticooke, Quebec, and Dr. Pierre Gauvin, of Island Pond, Vermont, are North Stratford, N. H.

At a hearing before U. S. Commissioner Walter M. Cleary at Newport, Vt., the two New Hampshire men were held $500 bail. The Canadians were released after they proved they were not accomplices in the smuggling of the liquor.

Washington, D. Governors of the forty-eight States also were notified that in emergency they may apply directly, if they prefer, directly to the department commanders for troops without going through the Governor of a request to the War Department.

Doctors May Strike for Higher Fees Says Brooks

Do you know that Boston doctors are the most wretched class, financially, in our social system? Do you know they are paid, on the average, less than half what the police struck for? That they get less than many carpenters? That they are urged to unionize and better their condition, even to going, if necessary, on strike?

Dr. William Allen Brooks, surgeon of international repute, past surgeon-general of Massachusetts and a specialist who saved hundreds of lives in the last influenza epidemic, says that doctors are in great financial distress.

"If the carpenters are intelligent enough to unionize," says Dr. Brooks, "let the doctors do as well.

"A union amalgamated with the American Federation of Labor, and a strike, emphatically a strike, will be the next step if things are not bettered immediately," adds the Boston surgeon. "I pay the woman who cleans my house $6.50 a day. To many a doctor in this city $6.50 a day is wealth unimagined. Doctoring and its remuneration are in a sorry mess in Boston. If help does not come I fear the discontent of rabid Socialism—of even the shames of Russian Bolshevism."

SEES END OF DISPENSARIES.

Dr. Brooks spoke with emphasis on the situation in our free dispensaries. "The dispensaries have served their day and are done," he says.

They were originally intended for poor people. Today the main beneficiaries at dispensaries are workers, some of them making $40 an hour. laborers at our ship yards with weekly salaries anywhere from $50 to $100—persons who make daily more than their financially distressed physicians get in a week.

"Why should these young doctors give, at free dispensaries, their services for nothing to men who are abundantly able to pay for those services? This is a rank social injustice. It is pauperizing a class—our working class—which, for the good of our nation, we can ill afford to pauperize. But this is not the whole story of dispensaries."

"Have you ever considered," he asked, "the needless loss of life that takes place in free dispensaries because of the desire to have there are young men getting their experience? Take surgeons, for instance. They get the training, usually, in these free dispensaries. They have more killing to their credit than it is comfortable to think about, before they have won their skill.

"This evil must be changed. It is not right that there should be such a loss. It is not right that the people who pay, who run business go to the free dispensary as to a bargain counter. They go often to get, not at bargain sales, goods worth only bargain prices.

MUST PAY FOR TREATMENT.

"They must pay for it, through insurance and a health tax. Doctors at dispensaries should be paid so that older men, who have proved their skill, can be present at operations. That will do away with loss of life. That will make those who are getting poor treatment free, get good treatment at a price they can afford, instead of the most precious of all possessions—their self-respect.

"The hospital in Cuba is supported altogether by persons of small means, who pay a dollar a year. The doctor does work there for a while, he "hustles his hospital," as they say, and gets out in private practice from which he draws his meager income."

SHOULD DEMAND RIGHTS.

"Do you really think the doctors should have definite working hours?" Dr. Brooks was asked.

"Certainly," he answered. "It is time now for doctors to stand up and ask for their rights. If a man's wife has the right to say 'no work after 6:15, the whistle blew fifteen minutes ago,' the doctor has the right to answer back, 'no calls, at 12:30 midnight.' He has a right to his sleep, to sit at the beck of even the humblest. I am at the mercy of those who control, unlimited, my income. I have to pay their doctor's bill.

"He makes yearly less than workmen of the class, skilled and unskilled. He is not reimbursed as a decent living demands, for the exercise of living ideals, should be reimbursed. Therefore he should answer no more calls than he can meet, when he has he has worked, in sickness and in health, develops its social conscience, gets together, and vows to put physician the recompense he earns."

All of which Dr. Brooks spoke, not as a man who asks more for personal reasons, but in the interests of general practitioners and younger doctors, who are suffering while the public conscience slumbers.

LANE BERATES ACCUSING PASTOR

Jurist Applies Hard Epithets, but Does Not Deny Bigamous Marriage

By Universal Service.

Newark, N. J., Oct. 1.—The Rev. Clarence Hill Frank of Stamford, Ct., who claims to have joined former Vice-Chancellor Merritt Lane and Mrs. Grace Hercht in wedlock on April 4, was called "an infernal liar," "an agitator" and "a notoriety-seeking emissary" by the former Vice-Chancellor in the course of a stormy interview.

A typewritten transcript of the interview was given out later by Lane's stenographer. Lane accused the clergyman of having circulated scandalous reports concerning the alleged marriage without being certain of his identification, but did not deny that he was the man who married Mrs. Hercht.

The clergyman, according to the typewritten report of the interview, told Lane the newspaper notoriety growing out of the case with its implications of bigamy had been very painful to him and that he had been deluged into the mails against his own wishes. He was also quoted as having said to Lane:

"I wouldn't take your word at 60 in a matter of morality."

The interview closed with this dialogue:

Rev. Frank—"I would have had a personal conversation with you, but you are not a man."

Lane—"You are?"

Rev. Frank—"You are not a man to talk to. Good-bye."

Lane—"Good day."

Rev. Frank—"It is a good day."

It has been alleged that Lane married Mrs. Hercht while he was the legal husband of Geraldine Garrison Kerr, whom he had married in this State a few days after his divorce from his first wife, Clara E. Wittenbach.

It also has been charged that before the divorces he went through a marriage ceremony with Mrs. Hercht in New York State. Counsel for officials of the three States who have investigated the alleged cases say there is no ground for prosecution, even if bigamy should be proved.

FIRST WIFE CONDOLES.

Jersey City, Oct. 1.—Sympathy was expressed for former Vice-Chancellor Lane by Mrs. Clara E. Wittenbart Lane, his first wife, in a statement given out today. "Both Mr. Lane and his wife have my sincere sympathy in this moment of stress," she said.

"I never at any time made any charges against my husband," she added, in reference to the circumstances of her divorce suit. "Nor did I ever discuss with the press any letters received from any other woman."

Mrs. Lane denied that any other woman had been mentioned in the case.

IRELAND'S LOSS OF POPULATION UNPARALLELED IN REST OF EUROPE

DE VALERA SHOWS RESULTS OF FAMINE AND MISRULE

FAMINE IN IRELAND
By EAMON DE VALERA,
President of the Irish Republic.

The public works undertaken by the British government to "relieve" distress during the famine period were all of a non-productive kind; of no permanent or temporary industrial or commercial value to Ireland. The railroad companies needed capital to extend the system—railroads were just being built at the time—but no money was forthcoming for this purpose.

Eamon De Valera.

Bogs needed draining, rivers rendered navigable, harbors wanted deepening—but such necessary and profitable (to Ireland) work was neglected.

Instead of that, 730,000 heads of families, representing nearly four millions of people, were employed for the most part at such useful work as making roads that served no purpose (the remains of such roads, grass-grown and untrodden, may be seen in Ireland today), building bridges where no streams ran, digging holes and filling them up again, and raising walls, only to knock them down.

And, in order to secure employment on the relief works, under a clause in the Outdoor Relief Act of 1847, a farmer was compelled to surrender his farm to his landlord, except one-quarter of an acre which he might retain. The whole administration of the different Relief Acts was in the hands of English officials. Thus even Ireland's misery was the means of providing lucrative jobs for Englishmen.

The money advanced by England to carry out these schemes was not, as she claims, English money; it was Irish money, part of the crushing burden of taxation she had imposed on Ireland.

FOSTER CORN LAWS.

Under the Foster Corn Laws—the corn laws adopted by the Irish Parliament in 1778—Ireland was, inside six years, turned from a great agricultural country into a tillage country. In 1846 England imposed her corn laws on Ireland and Ireland was turned back into grass, with the result that the famine was augmented. During the war of 1914-1918, under the Defence of the Realm Act, Ireland was compelled to till more in order that there might be no danger of famine. Again England's policy has always been to make Ireland her kitchen garden—her reserve larder to draw on in time of stress or danger.

In 1859-60 the west of Ireland suffered severely from famine, and in 1879 there was yet another famine. In that year the country (not the British government) was paying £1,011,880 ($5,059,400) in taxes for the support of its people, and £223,000 ($2,615,000) twenty years before.

PERENNIAL FAMINE.

From that day to this there has been perennial famine in parts of the west of Ireland, particularly in Connemara, in what are (British) officially known as the Congested Districts. Congested districts is a land capable, according to various authorities, of sustaining from 12,000,000 to 15,000,000 people, that now claims only 4,230,000.

Now let us turn to population and see what has been the result of English rule in Ireland and the destruction of Irish trade and commerce.

Ireland is the only subject nation in Europe whose population has decreased under alien rule. Poland under Russia, Poland under Austria, Poland under Prussia, Bohemia under Austria, Finland under Russia, Esthonia under Russia and Alsace-Lorraine under Germany all increased in population in modern times.

POPULATION FIGURES.

The following figures are all taken from government censuses and estimates of population:

Russian Poland, 1877-1915.

Population 1877	6,103,710
Population 1915	12,247,000
Increase 97.7 per cent.

Ireland, Same Period.

Population 1877	5,300,177
Population 1915	4,337,000
Decrease 18.7 per cent.

Had Ireland been as well off as the Poles under Russia, her population would have increased to 10,675,000.

Austrian Poland, 1846-1912.

Population 1846	4,561,400
Population 1918	8,311,779
Increase 84.1 per cent.

Ireland, Same Period.

Population 1846	8,287,344
Population 1912	4,397,076
Decrease 47.3 per cent.

Had Ireland been as well off as the Poles under Austrian rule, her population in 1913 would have stood at 16,258,600.

Prussian Poland 1825-1910.

Population 1825	1,382,634
Population 1910	2,099,831
Increase 30.8 per cent.

Ireland, Same Period.

Population 1825	6,614,465
Population 1910	4,365,421
Decrease 27.1 per cent.

Had Ireland been as well off as the Poles under Prussian rule, she would have increased to 9,070,000.

Bohemia, 1831-1913.

Population, 1831	3,900,000
Population, 1913	6,860,023
Increase, 75.9 per cent.

Ireland, Same Period.

Population, 1831	7,767,401
Population, 1913	4,379,011
Decrease, 43.6 per cent.

Had Ireland been as well off as the Bohemians under Austrian rule, it would have stood at 13,663,000.

Finland, 1850-1914.

Population, 1850	1,636,915
Population, 1914	3,259,01
Increase, 99.7 per cent.

Ireland, Same Period.

Population, 1850	6,977,80
Population, 1914	4,381,00
Decrease, 36.3 per cent.

Under Russian rule, as in Finland, Ireland's population should have increased to 13,738,000.

Esthonia, 1856-1915.

Population, 1856	290,52
Population, 1915	512,00
Increase, 74.6 per cent.

Ireland, Same Period.

Population, 1856	6,972,851
Population, 1915	4,337,000
Decrease, 37.4 per cent.

Under Russian rule as in Esthonia, Ireland's population would presumably have stood in 1915 at 10,429,000.

CONTINUOUS EMIGRATION.

Between the union of 1800 and the artificial famine of 1845-6, emigration from Ireland was continuous. In the ten years, 1832-1841, less than 50,000 persons emigrated to the United States, while 190,000 emigrated to Canada. In 1846, the year previous to the worst period of the famine, the estimated population of Ireland was 8,350,000, and the total number of emigrants to countries other than Great Britain was only 16,925, or less than half the present average when the population is little over 4,350,000.

From 1851, when emigration returns began to be officially taken, up to the present time, 4,500,000 people emigrated, 89 per cent. going to the United States, 10 per cent. to parts of the British empire, and 1 per cent. to other countries. It is worthy of note that prior to the famine emigration from the north of Ireland was much greater than from the south, west or east. Nearly one-half of the emigrants sailed from three northern ports.

In 1801, the population of Ireland was 5,395,456; that of England 8,892,536.

In 1841 the population of Ireland was 8,175,124; that of England 15,914,148.

In 1845, the population of Ireland was 8,295,028; that of Great Britain 19,481,352.

In 1911, the population of Ireland was 4,390,219; that of England 36,070,492.

Population per square mile:

	1801	1841	1911
Ireland	116	265	138
Decrease, 48 per cent.
England	153	279	418
Increase, 126 per cent.

Ireland, before the Union, had five men to England's eight. In 1840 Great Britain had seventeen people to Ireland's eight; today she has forty-three people to Ireland's four—under alleged "Equal Rule."

Nor has Ulster been spared. According to the official census returns, the

Population of Ulster in 1841	3,356,378
Population of Ulster in 1911	1,581,396
Decrease	804,977

NORTH LOST ONE THIRD

Thus the North of Ireland has lost more than one-third of its population in living memory. To this there is no parallel in the case of any European country outside Ireland. Nothing in Ulster has increased but the town of Belfast.

Every County in the Province as a whole has enormously decreased and one-third of the homesteads in the Ulster counties razed within the past 70 years. In 1841 there were in Ulster 403,646 homesteads; in 1911 there were only 280,339.

Ireland, with one exception, has the highest birthrate in Europe, and it is the only country with a decreasing population.

The natural increase of the population in Ireland between 1841 and 1911 (when the last census was taken would have left the country with a population of at least 16,000,000. Instead the number of people is little more than 4,000,000. Ireland, therefore, has lost three-fourths of her people through the blessings of British rule.

One aspect of the awful depopulation of Ireland during the past half century is that it represents a loss in capital estimated at least at £2,176,-250,000 ($10,921,250,000).

JUGO-SLAV TALK OF WAR WITH ITALIANS

Military Circles of New Republic Are Stirred by Territorial Dispute

By International News Service.

Rome, Oct. 1.—It was "authoritatively reported" from Belgrade today that Jugo-Slav military circles are "talking of war with Italy."

Rival claims for territory on the Adriatic littoral are being made by both Italy and Jugo-Slavia, but the chief dispute is over Fiume, now occupied by armed Italian forces under Captain Gabriele D'Annunzio.

D'Annunzio Refuses to Treat With Premier and Declares War on Jugo-Slavs

Rome, Oct. 1.—Gabriele D'Annunzio has declared war on the Jugo-Slavs.

Fiume, Sept. 29 (Delayed).—Captain Gabriele D'Annunzio, commander of the Italian forces that seized Fiume in defiance of the Allies, declared today that he would refuse to treat with Premier Nitti of Italy for a settlement of the trouble.

"But I am ready to negotiate with Premier Nitti's successor," said Captain D'Annunzio.

The poet-soldier refused to confirm or deny the persistent rumor that he plans the establishment of a republic along the lines of Ancient Venice.

"That is a matter for later consideration and must stand until the Fiume question is settled," he said.

Countess is Held for Theft of Undies in New York Store

By Universal Service.

New York, Oct. 1.—Countess Loretto, or Mrs. Mary Louise Hernandez, of Havana, as she prefers to be known, was arraigned here before Magistrate Cobb in Jefferson Market Court on the charge of having stolen two silk combination suits, valued at $7.50, from a Fifth avenue department store. Her counsel entered a plea of not guilty and asked for a continuance until tomorrow, which was granted.

"I am innocent of this charge," said Mrs. Hernandez in an interview before going to court. "I am a foreigner and that is why they say this about me. If I could only speak English well I could explain it all, but I must let my friends do that now."

$10,000 JEWEL ROBBERY IN WORCESTER

Thieves Strip Show Window in Centre of City; Third in Series of Breaks

Worcester, Oct. 1.—Jewelry valued at about $10,000 was taken from the store of P. L. Robbins, No. 64 Front street, early today, when robbers practically stripped a display window. They entered through the transom.

Cheaper grades of watches, rings and silverware which filled the show cases were not touched.

The police believe that the store has been under watch by the robbers for a period sufficient to acquaint them with conditions. The store is located in the centre of the city, in a section which is well patrolled.

The break was discovered by Patrolman Arthur C. Ljungberg, while trying the store door. He says everything in the store was all right on his previous trip.

This is the third of a series of robberies reported to the police in which entrance was gained through transoms.

DEFAULT WARRANT FOR SNATCH THIEF SUSPECT

A default warrant was issued today for Charles W. Wentworth of Waltham, who was released on $2,500 bail from the municipal court a week ago Monday on the charge of the larceny of $16 from Iva H. Dumniskaft of Kent street, Quincy. The police claim that Wentworth snatched the money from the hands of the other man in Scollay square.

PARKE TO DIRECT PUBLIC CELEBRATIONS; NO SALARY

Mayor Peters today announced that he had appointed his chief secretary, E. V. R. Parke, as director of public celebrations, without salary, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of John F. Dever, clerk of committees of the City Council. Mr. Dever received $1,400 a year for handling public celebrations. The Mayor felt that the appointment of Secretary Parke without pay would be economical.

DENIES BRITAIN AND PACKERS CONSPIRED

Commissioner Colver Charges Plot Hatched Against Export Trade of U. S.

By International News Service.

Chicago, Oct. 1.—A recommendation that the "whole scheme" of the excess profit tax be abolished as a "great step" toward the reduction of the cost of living and a vigorous denial of the charge said to have been made last July by Edward Morris, head of one of the "Big Five" meat packers, that he and the Federal Trade Commission had "conspired" with foreign governments, particularly England, against American export trade, were made here today by Commissioner William B. Colver of the Federal Trade Commission, in an address before the National Association of Advertising Specialty Manufacturers.

Referring also to the present widespread demand by organized labor, Commissioner Colver declared that labor has not improved its condition, when it says it will work only six hours a day and only five days a week. He added that neither has capital benefited itself when it seeks to multiply, "not by sweat but by a stroke of the pen; by a writing up of inventories or of values; by an issue of securities."

"There never was so bad a device in business as the device called 'cost-plus' and the excess profit tax is in its essence a 'cost-plus' scheme," asserted Colver.

"Under a 'cost-plus' arrangement of 10 per cent. profit on cost, one can increase his profit by one dollar only by wasting nine other dollars and we have that curious and impossible situation of attempting to create wealth by wasting it."

HELD FOR GRAND JURY FOR O'BRYAN'S DEATH

John J. Donahue, twenty-nine, of Green street, Newport, R. I., employed as a chauffeur for William L. Miller, of that city, was held in $3,500 for the Grand Jury on a continued case of manslaughter by Judge Logan in South Boston Court today in the death of Daniel O'Bryan, of 31 Vernon street, Dorchester, on the night of September 16. It is alleged O'Bryan, who had just alighted from a street car, on Dorchester avenue, was struck by an automobile truck driven by Donahue.

RECORD CROWD GATHER AT BROCKTON

Fair Attended by 55,000 People; Horse Show Closing Event This Afternoon

Brockton, Oct. 1. — Attendance at the Brockton Fair today created a record for the last half century, due to influenza, the last year not held. This, perhaps, inspired 55,000 to turn out today. Because of conveyances from automobiles, to the "one hoss shay," pressed into service to transport the crowd fairwards, and the fine weather was not so good as the opening day, it was no dampener to the enthusiasm. The New Haven railroads ran extra trains.

Children's Day of yesterday's regretful anticlimax today, the number of children who bought the high board fence. Sad event of this afternoon was the horse show. Hackneys and hackneys; saddle horses, ponies, harness horses, thoroughbreds and hunters were all shown, in separate classes. Trotting and pacing began this feature of the program at 1 o'clock.

Vaudeville and four bands furnished added entertainment. Fireworks were announced for this evening.

MISSION DRIVE STARTED AT WELLESLEY

Wellesley College girls today began a five-day drive for their combined relief and foreign missionary funds. Pledge cards are being distributed and "minute" women will espouse the cause by speeches in all of the dormitories.

The missionary committee supports two alumnae in religious work abroad, India and China. The committee on foreign educational work helps maintain its adopted sister college in Pekin, the only one in northern China. About $40,000 was contributed by Wellesley students last year.

A mass meeting will be held in the chapel of th college at 7:15 p. m. to hear reports on the drive.

FAMOUS PLANE NC-4 LEAVES BOSTON

The NC-4, which has been tied up in Boston harbor since Saturday on a recruiting mission, left here today for New Bedford and Providence.

Escorted by two planes from the Chatham aviation base, the big aircraft got away at ten o'clock, "taxied" down the harbor, and taking the air circled over the city for some time. Then the record-holding machine straightened out for the hour's flight to New Bedford by way of the Cape Cod canal.

At New Bedford Commander A. J. Read and his crew were guests at a luncheon given by the civic authorities, following which the plane proceeded to Providence. The motor ship Isabel was awaiting them there, having left Boston at 7 a. m., and omitting the stop at New Bedford.

Before leaving Boston Commander Read expressed himself as being much pleased with the success of the recruiting drive.

In East Boston, Mass., at 53 Lamson Street, a contented family of three children and the mother live, daily thanking in silence the kind neighbor who helped them when they were sick. Mrs. Nellie Woodford is the mother, and she writes the following letter to Dr. J. F. True & Co.: "Having heard about your medicine from my neighbors and druggist, I wondered if your Dr. True's Elixir wasn't what I needed. I am a hard-working woman, working six hours every day for the Penn Realty Trust Company in Boston. In doing this work I use a lot of strength. Besides this, looking after my house and the care of my three children wore me out.

"I guess my nerves got out of kilt first. I worried a lot, and seemed to get tired easy. I lost my appetite, I was overtaken with dizzy spells, my eyes got blurred, and I soon found I had to stay home from work. I didn't do any housework, but the rest didn't do any good.

"I always had one special doctor for myself and the children, but he was out of town when I was sick. I took medicine from the druggist which my friends brought in, but nothing did any good. My bowels were out of order. My breath had and I was shaky all over. Worst of all, the terrible headaches came. It seemed I had suffered years before your Dr. True's Elixir was brought into me by a neighbor.

"After a short time I began to cheer up and be myself again. My bowels were soon in order and I noticed that the dizzy spells had left me. I think your Elixir wonderful. I am working every day now, getting stronger and picking up my appetite. I feel full of gratitude toward Dr. True's Elixir.

"The children sometimes eat things which don't agree with them, when I am not around to see, and then cramps and constipation follow. I just get out my bottle of Dr. True's Elixir and find no trouble in getting them to take some. It is easy to take. Their bowels are open all right. It may interest you to know that recently my youngest child was taking sick and it was a serious case. We all have your Elixir to thank for relieving her of stomach worms. When I gave it to Louise it acted like magic, and fixed her up only after two doses."

Signs of worms are: Constipation, hardened full belly, swollen upper lip, sour stomach, offensive breath and occasional pains, pale face of leaden tint, eyes heavy and dull, twitching eyelids, itching of the nostrils, and short, dry coughs, grinding of the teeth, little red points sticking out on the tongue, starting during sleep, slow fever. If your children show any of these symptoms, start giving Dr. True's Elixir. The Family Laxative and Worm Expeller, at once. It has done wonders for children and grownups since 1854. At All Dealers.

Courts to Determine Much-Mooted Status of Jamaica Ginger

A test case to determine the status of Jamaica Ginger will be tried in the Suffolk county courts shortly, as the result of the granting of a warrant today for the arrest of Anastasio Michaultopolos, a grocer, of Endicott street, North End. The warrant was granted by Judge Dowd to Sergeant McTiernan of the Hanover street station.

The police claim to have seized thirteen bottles of "Jakes" at the store of Michaultopolos. They maintain that he is guilty of keeping and exposing intoxicating liquor for sale in violation of the law. According to the police, Jamaica Ginger is a medicine and therefore can be sold only by druggists.

COUNTS BROKE, WEALTHY WIDOW BETROTHED TO ONE

New York, Oct. —"You know the counts are all broke now. I have the money, so why shouldn't I bring one more with me," said Mrs. Marie Dimanstanoff to a number of friends on the sailed for Europe two months ago.

Lift off Corns!

Doesn't hurt a bit and Freezone costs only a few cents.

With your fingers! You can lift any hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the hard skin calluses from bottom of feet.

A tiny bottle of "Freezone" costs little at any drug store; apply a few drops upon the corn or callus. Instantly it stops hurting, then shortly you lift that bothersome corn or callus right off, foot and all, without one bit of pain or soreness. Truly! No bunkup!

DR. FLEISCHER MARRIED BY OWN SERVICE

Conductor of Sunday Commons Takes Lawyer as Bride

Dr. Charles Fleischer, former rabbi of the Temple Israel and now conductor of the Sunday Commons, was married to Miss Mabel Rebecca Leslie, a lawyer, by a service written by Dr. Fleischer and 600 words longer than the old marriage ceremony, "Wherefore art thou, tinous there am I, Gaia."

The Rev. Edward Cummings, pastor of the Second Congregational (Unitarian) Church, Back Bay, officiated and the ceremony was held in Dr. Fleischer's apartment at No. 230 Dartmouth street, in accordance with the belief that the future home of the couple should be consecrated by the service, not some spot which the contracting two are to leave behind them on their democratic course down the pathways of marital bliss.

Dr. Fleischer's marriage service admits no reference to honor and obey, though love enters over and again, the greatest emphasis being placed on the contracting parties trying to be faithful and devoted each to the other individuality and the retaining of it despite any bond in the keynote of the new service, called by its author the "true democratic marriage service."

The new marital covenant particularly warns against the degeneration of the present poetic sentiment of sweethearts into the prosy relationship of humdrum husband and wife. It lauds the lure of mystery, the savor of pursuit, the keeping of the poetry and chivalrousness of courtship throughout married life.

Mrs. Fleischer is a well-known lawyer, and has an office in Tremont street. She intends to resume her practice upon her return to Boston the after part of October. The keeping of her practice is the putting into practice of their theories.

SIDE-CAR TEARS SHOE FROM FOOT OF MAN

David Coughlin, sixty years old, of No. 405 Harrison avenue, while on his way to work early today was painfully injured by the side-car of a motorcycle being operated by Eugene S. Fox of Shawmut avenue. The accident occurred at the corner of Quincy street and Columbia road. Coughlin was struck in such a manner that the right toe of his shoe was torn completely off. He was taken to the City Hospital by Frank Nagle and William J. Quinn, superintendents of city garbage and street cleaning, who were passing.

Rich Fathers' Sons Don Overalls in Lawrence

Lawrence, Oct. 1.—The scion of the rich family is going back to overalls in this city. Last week Cornelius A. Wood began carrying a lunch kit. This week Maryland C. Hobbs, son of Franklin Hobbs, president of the Arlington Mills Company, is in overalls and jumper at the Arlington Mills here. Young Hobbs won the Croix de Guerre for bravery at the Forest Agreement. He was a lieutenant of Company I, 103d Infantry. He spent several weeks in a prison camp in Southern Germany during the last days of the war. He says that he believes in rubbing elbows with the "regular fellows" in the manufacturing game and hopes some day to be a leader in industry.

HORMEL SCORES LONG FOR POLICE ATTITUDE

Herman Hormel, chairman of the Republican City Committee, today replied to a statement from the campaign headquarters of Richard H. Long, in which Long's attitude on the police situation was defended. Mr. Hormel declared that the statement was full of misinformation, and that Mr. Long, as Democratic candidate for Governor, refused to tell where he stood.

Mr. Hormel denied that due notice was served on Governor Coolidge or Commissioner Curtis that the men were to strike. He ridiculed the idea that a constabulary policy would have kept them out of the American Federation of Labor. Mr. Hormel also took issue with statements made by Chairman O'Leary of the State Democratic Committee.

BELGIAN EXHIBIT AT PUBLIC LIBRARY

The coming visit of Cardinal Mercier to Boston has prompted the Public Library to prepare an appropriate exhibition, which is now on view in the fine arts department.

Cider Mills Kept Busy By Thirsty Granite State

Franklin, N. H., Oct. 1.—Cider mills in this part of the State are doing a rushing business and from appearances there will be more private supplies of apple juice this Fall and Winter than were ever put into local cellars before.

Since the bone dry spell came on cider has become a very popular drink and it is known to the authorities that much of it has been sold illegally. It is difficult to "get the goods" on the sellers, however.

WILL OMITTED WIDOW, DISALLOWED BY JUDGE

Judge J. H. Flint in the Norfolk County Probate Court at Dedham today disallowed the will of the late George T. Day, a Brookline man who conducted a meat business in Roxbury, drawn in 1896, disposed of $90,000 personal property and $500 real estate. The testator gave to Laura G. Hall, then his wife, $20,000, the residue to be divided between two brothers and a sister. After the will was drawn, Mrs. Day died, and Day married again. No change was made in the will, however, and as there was no provision for the present widow, Mrs. Ethel N. Day, the court disallowed the will.

LANSING TURNS QUERIES ABOUT BULLITT

Secretary of State Refuses to Comment on So-Called "Impeachment"

Washington, Oct. 1.—Since his return to Washington from his vacation, Secretary Lansing has persistently refused to make any statement in reply to the declarations made to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee by William C. Bullitt involving Mr. Lansing's good faith in support of the peace treaty.

Mr. Bullitt told the committee of a conversation he had with Mr. Lansing in Paris which convinced him Mr. Lansing could not be "at all enthusiastic about the League of Nations as it stands at present." Mr. Lansing told Mrs. Mr. Bullitt informed the committee, he "considered many parts of the treaty thoroughly bad, particularly those dealing with Shantung and the League of Nations." He said, according to Mr. Bullitt, that "If the Senate could only understand what this treaty means and if the American people could really understand, it would unquestionably be defeated."

These statements of Mr. Bullitt to the Senate committee were made after Secretary Lansing himself had been before the committee in defence of the advocacy of the treaty.

Mr. Bullitt's statements, therefore, seemed to be a definite impeachment of Mr. Lansing's good faith in supporting the treaty.

It was expected that Mr. Lansing would answer them at once. He refrained from doing so. Then it was thought he surely would answer them on his return to Washington. He has been here two days, has made no formal statement, and has positively declined to reply to any interrogatories on the subject.

If he did not answer Mr. Bullitt's statements, it was quite generally expected that he would resign. This expectation was based upon the assumption that, if Mr. Bullitt's assertions were undeniable, it would be embarrassing for Mr. Lansing to remain in the Cabinet. But apparently Mr. Lansing seems disposed to bear whatever embarrassment there is in the situation. His friends say he has no intention of resigning.

DOCTOR SLAIN: 100 WOMEN SUSPECTED

Chicago, Oct. 1.— Approximately 100 women were possible suspects in the slaying of Dr. Adrian Reginald Karreman, a Chicago physician, with a large and fashionable clientele.

Dr. Karreman was found dead on a burning couch in his office. He had been strangled to death with a small hempen noose. Investigation revealed hundreds of love letters among his effects, and it is only through these that it is hoped to trace the slayer or slayers.

Detectives today set out to interview all of the writers.

LONG PREDICTING COOLIDGE'S DEFEAT

Richard H. Long of Framingham, Democratic candidate for Governor, has issued a statement in which he states that Governor Coolidge will be defeated in November in as decisive a manner as former Governor Foss was defeated at the primaries.

Long even goes as far as to charge that "in some cities Republicans are holding back the returns" with relation to the Governor's vote in the primaries.

TEACHES GIRLS HOW TO CARE FOR SICK

Graduates of South End Institution Fine Substitutes for Trained Nurses

The Boston Household Nursing Association, at No. 544 Massachusetts avenue, in its charming old-fashioned house, with its sunny kitchens, high-studded rooms, is renewing its campaign to make the expense of illness among those who find the expense severe a little more moderate.

"We started a little over a year ago," explained Miss Isabella Stewart, superintendent, "with Mrs. J. Randolph Coolidge and other ladies back of us with help and friendly counsel. Our object was to train here attendants who could take the place of a trained nurse and would not be so expensive.

"Have you ever thought that the very poor, who accept charity, and the rich, who can pay for anything they want, get the best nursing in the country? Have you ever considered the large middle class in between, who can pay for some, but not fancy rates, who are most distressed to pay the large salary of a trained nurse? It is for the self-respecting, self-supporting middle class that we are training these young ladies here as attendants. It is also for those cases where the illness is not serious enough to demand a trained nurse.

"Our course is six months of schooling, and six months probationary. At the end of this time, our graduates are diplomaed, and work under supervision, whom themselves worthy. The course is divided this way:

"For the first two months we teach the girls cooking and dietetics and general housekeeping and management here. They then go to hospitals, for practical experience. The Collis P. Huntington Hospital, the Norwood Hospital and the Henry Heywood, in Gardner, are affiliated hospitals. At the Talitha Cumi Hospital and the Rufus Frost Hospital in Chelsea, our girls receive a short maternity course.

GET FAIR SALARIES.

Miss Shepard's explanation does not half tell the great demand for these trained attendants. Girls entering this year will be given scholarships, if they satisfy the authorities of their ability and need. Otherwise a small fee is charged. The uniforms are a smart brown, with a smart white cap. The course is open to girls of grammar school education. The salaries the graduates bring range from $17 a week to $22. The Household Nursing Association, moreover, stands right behind its attendants, furnishing, at all times, whenever needed, a graduate trained nurse to advise with the attendant. The attendant, moreover, during her six months of probationary work is under the supervision by a graduate nurse.

For girls who wish an occupation that is dignified and kindly and most necessary, but who, through education or lack of time, cannot qualify for a trained nurse, this course is open. Such a good name has the work already made for itself, that Miss Shepard, the superintendent, has been asked by medical associations, and a convention of nurses, to tell of the association's work, and Dr. Henry Bolden, of the General Public Hospital, St. John, N. B., came all the way to Boston to get the work for reproduction in his native city.

PLACES NOW OPEN.

Applicants between seventeen and forty years of age, with good health and a grammar school education, who wish to give the next six months to training for this profession, should apply at once, as the classes are being filled rapidly. The association has many public-spirited men and women on its board.

Mrs. J. Randolph Coolidge, Jr., Mrs. J. Randolph Coolidge, 3rd, Mrs. William W. Vaughan and Bradlee Penne are among those on the visiting and nurses who advise with the superintendent are Drs. Lloyd T. Brown, Robert B. Greenough, Stephen Rushmore, Richard M. Smith, Richard G. Wadsworth and Miss Mary Heard. Miss Elizabeth Bree of the Red Cross, and Miss Elizabeth Sullivan of the Children's Hospital.

Judge Morton sentenced Albert Wardzala to serve a year and a day at Greenfield jail on the indictment which charged him with concealing assets and he was also sentenced to serve a year and a day at the same institution on the indictment which charged him with taking a false oath in a bankruptcy case.

The three other defendants were found not guilty.

RESCUE TWO GLOUCESTER FISHERMEN NEAR DEATH

Portland, Me., Oct. 1.—Nearly dead from exhaustion, Helmer Halverson and Lewis Nelsner of Gloucester, Mass., were rescued forty miles southeast of Cape Elizabeth by the Portland fishing schooner Lochinvar. The men were brought into this port where they said that they were about ready to give up all efforts to keep the forty-foot sloop Lizzie Joy afloat when found. They left North Haven Friday with 14,000 pounds of salt fish for Gloucester when the craft, which had not been hauled up for nearly three years, sprung a leak.

BUCKLEY HELD IN $12,500 IN AUTO THEFTS

Five Others Arrested in Middlesex Grand Jury Crusade and Bound Over for Trial

The Middlesex County crusade against organized automobile thieves resulted in six more arrests today, including the rearrest of John J. Buckley of Somerville, who is well known in boxing circles.

The men were immediately arraigned before Judge O'Connell in Superior Court, East Cambridge, and held in bail ranging upward from $1,000.

Buckley, who was already out on $2,500 bail, awaiting trial on a charge of conspiracy to steal automobiles, was rearrested on ten indictments allegeing receipt of stolen machines. At the urgent request of Assistant District Attorney George Stanley Harvey, his bail was raised from $2,500 to $12,500.

The others arrested were Thomas Reagan, charged with conspiracy to steal autos; Lawrence Fusco and Alfred Dion, Medford, and Samuel Monroe and Joseph Gavin, Cambridge, charged with larceny of machines. All were held in $5,000 bail.

The drive is to continue, according to District Attorney Tuttle's office. Other arrests are expected, and a number of undesirable citizens without visible means of support have hurriedly left Cambridge.

$38,000 GOES TO HOUSEKEEPER IN WILL FIGHT

Jury Decides Perry Eaton Was Sane, After Being Out Eight Hours

Nashua, N. H., Oct. 1.—The jury in the Eaton will case decided that Perry Eaton of Weare, N. H., was sane when he made his will in 1915, and so reported to the court today. As to whether he was unduly influenced when he made either the will or the codicil, seven days before his death, of was sane at the time the codicil was made, the jurors were unable to decide after eight hours of deliberation.

Perry Eaton, Jr., and his daughter, the contestants of the will by which $38,000 of the $100,000 estate is left to Mrs. Lydia J. Dow, Eaton's housekeeper, are expected to appeal.

The case was given to the jurors at 3 p. m. Tuesday. They deliberated until midnight, reporting once for additional instructions. At midnight they retired on cots in the courthouse and resumed their sessions at 8 a. m. today. Their verdict was returned shortly before noon.

Accuses Hitchcock of Changing Front on League

Washington, D. C., Oct. 1. — Quoting from a speech by Senator Hitchcock, Democrat, Nebraska, on the British arbitration treaty in the Senate on January 4, 1912, Senator Fall, Republican, New Mexico, sought to show in the Senate that the attitude of the administration leader toward the United States allying herself with Great Britain nearly eight years ago was the reverse of the Senator's position on the League of Nations now.

Fall charged that Hitchcock had taken issue with Sir Edward Grey, the new British ambassador to the United States, on the arbitration treaty at that time on the basis that it was the first step in a possible entangling alliance of the United States in the politics of Great Britain.

"We certainly want no alliance with any country and must avoid becoming involved," Fall quoted Hitchcock as then declaring.

BUILDING FACES FOR SOLDIERS TIRESOME

Mayor von Zelinski, After Long War Work Among Wounded, Now Seeks Discharge

After spending many months making new faces, noses, lips, eyebrows and chins for the wounded in France, Major W. F. von Zelinski of Chicago, attached to the Medical Corps, 8th Field Artillery, 7th Division, arrived today at army headquarters, seeking his discharge from service.

"I wouldn't take $1,000,000 for my experience in France," said the major, "to see people with their faces terribly injured, and then to see the human face and how many soldiers had to have their faces built over again, they would never allow war to take place.

"My duty has been to make new faces, new noses, eyebrows, chins and lips. If any work has brought the horrors of war before me, this has certainly done it."

Discussing the French surgeons, he said:

"The French surgeons are simply in a class by themselves. They are fantastic and are eager to do everything themselves."

Major von Zelinski was born in Prussia and came to this country when he was about seven years old. Later he returned to Germany and lived some time in that country, but came back to America again, and has lived here many years since.

COLD STORAGE BILL PASSED BY HOUSE

Washington, D. C., Oct. 1.—The House passed the cold storage limitation bill requested by President Wilson as one of the necessary measures against the high cost of living.

Are You, Too, Paying the Price?

WE all seek life's comforts and pleasures, but many of us pay too high a price for them. Continued over-working, over-eating and over-drinking; late hours and loss of sleep, gradually roll up an account that brings sickness and enforced rest. Weak kidneys is the common penalty. Daily backache, dizzy spells, headaches, rheumatic pains and kidney irregularities are warnings of kidney weakness. Don't wait! Neglect may lead to gravel, dropsy or Bright's disease. For quick relief avoid over-eating, over-drinking, over-working and other excesses, and help the weakened kidneys with Doan's Kidney Pills. Doan's have brought new health and happiness to thousands of sufferers. Many of them live right here in Boston. Ask your neighbor!

These are Boston People:

E. EMERSON ST. (S. BOSTON)

Mrs. M. Gottlich, 39 East Emerson street, So. Boston, says: "Often my back was so sore I could not straighten without experiencing much pain. Sharp twinges in my back would often make me scream, and nights my rest was disturbed. I got up mornings tired and nervous, and I was caused a lot of annoyance by the irregular action of my kidneys. Nothing I took seemed to relieve the trouble until I began the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. I got instant relief from this remedy, and since then, whenever I have felt an attack of kidney trouble coming on, Doan's have always fixed me up in a day or two."

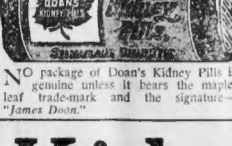
E. FOURTH ST. (S. BOSTON)

Adam Ott, prop. of wagon and auto repair shop, 646 E. Fourth St., South Boston, says: "My back often ached, and I was stiff and lame. Colds made the trouble worse, and my kidneys distressed me by their irregular action, too. On the advice of a friend, I used Doan's Kidney Pills, and they strengthened my back and kidneys, removed the stiffness in my limbs and back and made me feel better in every way."

TREMONT STREET

C. P. Lawless, 344 Tremont St., says: "A cold I took settled in my kidneys and I came down with backache. The pains centered in the small of my back and it hurt me whenever I stooped over. At such times I would get a stitch through my kidneys when straightening up. All work was hard for me. Doan's Kidney Pills helped me at once and three boxes removed all trouble." (Statement given March 21, 1916.)

On February 1, 1919, Mr. Lawless said: "My faith in Doan's Kidney Pills is as strong as ever. I know they can't be beat for kidney trouble and I always highly recommend them."



NO package of Doan's Kidney Pills is genuine unless it bears the maple-leaf trade-mark and the signature—"James Doan."

WEBSTER ST. (E. BOSTON)

Mrs. Fred Grant, 162 Webster St., E. Boston, says: "The first symptom of kidney complaint in my case was backache. I used to have to lie down on account of the terrible pains through my kidneys and across my loins, and I was miserable most of the time. The irregular action of my kidneys caused me no end of annoyance, and I also had headaches and specks before my eyes. Hearing about Doan's Kidney Pills, I used a few boxes, which I procured from Woodbury Co.'s Drug Store, and they gave me excellent relief. I was soon relieved by Doan's Kidney Pills."

WARREN AVENUE

Mrs. E. E. Myers, 49 Warren Ave., says: "I suffered from dull, nagging backaches and felt dull and tired out. My work was a burden to me, and I didn't feel like going up or down stairs. My kidneys distressed me by their irregular action, too. One box of Doan's Kidney Pills strengthened my back and kidneys, and I consider them a good remedy."

HOODS CLAIM TO SELL MILK AT LOSS

Must Pay Farmer More for Product, but Will Not Raise Price to Public

N. C. Davis of H. P. Hood & Sons has just issued the following statement:

"Beginning today H. P. Hood & Sons will pay the farmer 9½ cents per quart for milk delivered in Boston, which is one-half cent more than he now receives; November 1 this is increased to 10 cents and it remains so through December. If we passed this advance on to the consumer, we would be obliged to charge 14½ cents in October and 17 cents in November and December.

PRICE NOT ADVANCED.

"Realizing, as we do, that milk is a necessity of life, that it is the sole article of diet for infants deprived of mother's milk and also for invalids, and, actuated by a sincere desire to do our part to stop the advancing cost of living, we are not advancing the price to the consumer over that of last Winter. We, therefore, ask the consumer to pay 14½ cents per quart during October, November and December, which is the same price that we charged November and December last year.

"These increases to the farmer, together with our own increased expenses will make the cost to us for each quart of milk we deliver to the consumer more than 14½ cents, which means an actual loss based on the present amount of milk consumed. If the public will co-operate with us by a liberal use of milk as a food we shall be able to continue to sell at this price, because increased consumption of milk by the public will add to the amount carried by each delivery wagon and thereby reduce the cost of delivery.

TABLE SHOWS EXPENSES.

"The table below shows our increased expenses for October, November and December this year over last. We invite any persons who have at heart the welfare of the public to audit our books and verify these figures:

BERKSHIRE TROLLEY SERVICE RESUMED

North Adams, Oct. 1.—After nearly eight weeks without trolley service of any kind, residents of this city and nearby towns were this morning able to ride to work on the cars. Following approval by the Public Service Commission of increase fare schedules the Berkshire Street Railway Company has resumed operations and persons in towns and cities served by the company are jubilant.

Under the new fare schedule a seven-cent fare is charged to both Adams and Williamstown, instead of the former ten-cent rate, while a ten-cent fare, instead of the former five cent one, prevails to Briggsville. Service to Bennington and Pittsfield has been discontinued.

LEXINGTON VISION OF NEW STATION FADES

Lexington, Oct. 1.—Residents of this town are not much pleased with the idea of patching up the old station at Lexington Centre on the Boston & Maine Railroad, which was badly damaged by fire last November, for it had been understood that a new station was to be erected in its place. Visions of a new station faded with the appearance of a gang of carpenters, plumbers, etc., who have started in to fix up the old building.

BOSTON DOCTOR IS GIVEN WAR CROSS

Colonel Jeel E. Goldthwaite, the Boston orthopaedic physician who gained a name for himself in administering to the needs of the Y. D. overseas, was decorated at army headquarters with a distinguished service medal by Major-General C. R. Edwards in the presence of his staff.

General Edwards in making this award said in part:

"It is my peculiar pleasure in pinning this medal on you to recall what noble work you did in France in reclaiming many a man to active service who, without your care, would have been unfitted for duty.

THOUSANDS HUNT AS DEER SEASON OPENS

Bangor, Oct. 1.—Thousands of hunters from all sections of the country flocked to the northern counties today when the law went off on deer, and early indications show that this year will be one of the heaviest hunting seasons in the history of the State.

Residents as well as those from outside the State must register, according to the new game laws. Among the early hunters were many who had never handled a gun until they saw service in the army.

BOGUS U. S. AGENT TRIES TO SWINDLE LAWRENCE FAMILY

Lawrence, Oct. 1.—Attempts at swindling certain foreign speaking peoples under the guise of government inspectors have taken place here in the past few days. The police are seeking the man who called at the home of Euclid Tontebaud, No. 363 Hampshire street, who recently came from Canada with his wife and nine children, and sought to collect an "immigration tax" of $2 a head for each member of the family.

The bogus collector stated that he came from Boston headquarters and that the law to make such payments to the government was new. At the time the woman did not have the money but promised to pay it when he returned.

The new double-breasteds

THEY'VE "hit the mark" with young men. Maybe it's because they're such a complete change from the single-breasted army blouse; maybe it's because they set off the broader chests so well; make young men look wiry, athletic.

The old double-breasteds were square and bulky looking; few men could wear them.

The new double-breasteds as we make them look well on any man; one, two and three button models; some with belts.

VON TIRPITZ SAYS MENACE OF REVOLT OPPRESSED WAR LORDS

WARNED CROWN PRINCE OF PERIL OF UPRISING

VON TIRPITZ MEMOIRS

By Alfred von Tirpitz

Grand Admiral of the German Navy

In spite of the inexplicable and baffling attitude of Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg and his colleagues, in abandoning the naval policies for which I stood sponsor, I was not altogether without friends in high station during the troublesome days in the latter part of 1915. The Crown Prince was one of the stauncheest supporters of submarine warfare, and frequently told me so.

While lacking the attributes of real leadership, and partaking in a great degree of some of the traits of his imperial father, with which I knew how to deal through long association, nevertheless the crown prince was a keen observer; though at that time he was absent from Great Headquarters and busy with his own command, he kept well in touch with developments. He was not the politician nor the friend of politicians that his father was.

In fact, the Crown Prince was for direct action. He regarded the submarines, and rightly so, as a great bulwark in our war of resistance against the barbarous blockade of England. We were building bigger and better submarines and, what was more important, we were learning how to use them more effectively. So that, when my optimism and my convictions would not always run line abreast with the course of the Wilhelmstrasse I cherished the aid and comfort that the Crown Prince always showed.

September 25 the Crown Prince called me on the field telephone which connected Great Headquarters in Luxembourg with his own army command. He has just heard of some good work by our brave fellows on the U-boats and he wished to congratulate me personally for it. He went on to converse about other affairs, mostly state matters.

He asked me about reports that were appearing throughout Europe of friction between me and the Chancellor, and from this we naturally talked something about the state of things—affairs in general; of Bethmann and von Jagow. The Crown Prince was always fearful that Germany would be blamed unjustly for causing the war, and he was always ready with a defence of Germany's course. He fulfilled the true concepts of loyalty to his house and to his fatherland.

I reserved some of my opinions in this conversation, but did tell him this much: That we had the strength to hold out, and must do so. One other thing I brought up, which I was always considering: The danger of a rising in Germany. I was quite frank with Frederick William. There was good hope, if a revolt would not go against the government. He received my foreboding with surprise.

TROOPS HEARD OF UNREST.

I had heard that day from a gentleman who had come from the battle lines there was apprehension in certain quarters; that in the army, even at the front lines, the idea had leaked out that the High Command was beginning to throw up the sponge. No matter whether there was basis for this belief or not, I could not help but note that our first wonderful morale was failing. But nothing was known of this in the nation at large, thank God!

Perhaps I was too conservative. Perhaps I wasted my fears. But a doubt this, for taken as a whole, the best opinion in Germany was that we could, and would, end the war before the first of the year, 1916. So fatuous was the belief, that I justify my course and insistence on stern and vigilant measures in the light of events.

If others raised doubts at Great Headquarters, it would be in such language as "unless we do thus and so" we might not win quickly; or "it would be too bad if the great military decision should not done, now that the supreme struggle is imminent."

But was there ever to be a decision? Preparations belied it. Here we were fighting the kind of a war that Downing street would have prayed for; there was no chance for us of another Sedan or a Metz. Our brilliant drive had not met the success that was desired for it. And, worst of all, failure was due to mistakes—all on our own side!

Third was a period of pause on all fronts. The impact of the chancellor's opinion may have caused it. Even in the east the big guns ceased thundering. That was a mistake, for the Russians at that time were in such terror of Hindenburg that it amounted positively to a superstition. They endowed him veritably with the supernatural. I was thankful, indeed, that in these times the submarine successes counted for much, and counteracted the worst elsewhere.

In my diary I find this entry: "Thank God! We have more submarines for offensive purposes than England. It is to be hoped that they will meet with still greater success than they have so far." With our high hopes, it still was curious how we had come to be the most-hated people on the face of the earth. Everyone wanted Germany, I judged, to be laid low.

LUXEMBURGERS WERE HOSTILE.

The uneasy folk in Luxemburg showed this attitude. They first viewed our advent as the vanguard of a triumphal procession, which was always to be in motion—stopping only at the English Channel, and then going on to victory. When it halted, they were always awaiting the hour when the panoply of war would move on again. But, when it failed to move, the Luxemburgers not festive. It was plain in October, 1915, that we had worn our welcome out with them. They could not help but imagine things must be getting bad at the front.

The attitude of Italy and Rumania continued to bother us. Those jackals of nations! They had to wait to see how the cat jumped before coming in on either side. Then, too, our hopes of Turkey were coming to nothing. This was contained in private advices to me from Admiral von Usedom, my friend, even in advance of the Kaiser himself knowing it. The old admiral, then long in retirement, was doing what he could to keep the Turkish supremacy intact around the Bosporus. He was earning once more the order Pour le Merite which I shared with him alone of all the admirals of the Germany Navy.

When I thought, too, in those depressing hours, of the lazy Australians for whom staunch Germans were shedding their blood, it was not pleasant. But the whole business, I told myself, was inevitable. How could an expanding Germany suit anybody's game?

Stupidity in high quarters was providing a riddle for us: How could peace possibly end with dignity for Germany? Our statesmen were so blind they let themselves be driven into war when the signs in the heavens gave warning. The task of peace was not pleasant to confront then. To me, who ignored nothing that might be of service to the Fatherland, it seemed like the problem of squaring the circle.

ATE IN SILENCE.

We messed together in the same great hall in those days at Luxembourg, but we never exchanged a word with each other. Mutual recriminations were in the mind if not the word. There was good reason for it. Here was a case where our army, in a tremendous onrush, had shed its blood prodigally, and poured out losses unceasing, bringing a very small proportionate result. Ami encircling this turmoil stood the black spectre of the pressure of the sea power of England, exerted in the blockade. This was bound to grow greater with time. The small successes of our fleet did not deceive me. The fleet should not have been held in leash. An ostrich to watch our foes ashore should have been the order. For our brave sailors were ready. If our hands played on the decks of Wilhelmshaven, it was only after hard drills and manoeuvres, and the music matched the spirit of the men.

For out at sea were our raiders, detached, without friends. They were getting fine results, but one after another, I told myself, they must perish for lack of coal and provisions, for there were no revictualing ports.

The same thing that handicapped our raiders was occurring in a large sense on land, through England's attitude. She had just shaken the club over the Swiss, and they issued a ban on war exports. Holland did likewise.

Continued Tomorrow.

Admiral von Tirpitz begins in his next instalment a detailed analysis from the inside of the causes leading to the war, describing with a wealth of hitherto unpublished facts just how Germany embarked on hostilities. He not only tells the "how" of the war, but the "why," not neglecting, as usual, to blame England for all the troubles of Germany. He says the Kaiser was opposed to war.

N. Y. PRINTING STRIKE STARTS AHEAD OF TIME

New York, Oct. 1.—The printing trades strike in Greater New York scheduled to go into effect today broke ahead of time when 200 pressmen and feeders employed by the Federal Printing Company, one of the biggest in the city, quit work.

The walkout was precipitated by the announcement that no pressmen or feeders would be employed by the company unless they carried cards in the international unions. This procedure had been agreed upon by all of the publishers.

COAL WORKERS DEMAND NEW SCALE FOR NOV. 11

Buffalo, Oct. 1.—President J. L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers of America put a definite proposition up for action at the conference of workers and operators and thereby opened the way out of the deadlock caused by the operators' tentative refusal of the demands of the men.

Lewis put before the meeting a motion that the Washington anthracite agreement now in effect officially terminate October 31. The workers have demanded the new scale for November 11.

CRUCIBLE SOARS AFTER EARLY DECLINE

Retail Stores Makes Large Gain; Rails Improve During Morning

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were strong in New York at noon, but prices ruled below the morning highest. Profit taking was resumed just before 12 o'clock and affected steels, which had been showing gains from the opening. The reaction was of small consequence, however, and left them irregular as to price last night. Crucible still above 250. Rails improved in the second hour and were active as well as strong. The market was in two hour transactions totalling more than 400,000 shares. In the foreign exchange market sterling rates were 4.14 for demand and 4.18⅝ for cables. France rates were 9.17 and 9.15, and lire rates 9.17 and 9.15, while the mark quotation was 4.42⅝.

FIRST MOVEMENT WAS UPWARD.

The first movement of prices was upward, the market opening strong and active and a number of stocks making substantial gains. Among them were Atlantic Gulf, Baldwin Famous Players, Rubber and Retail Stores. They were up from two points to nearly half a point on first sales. Three issues sold within half an hour at highest record prices, they being Western Pacific, Crucible and Worthington Pump, while Baldwin opened at its 1919 highest. Studebaker was higher at the start, but their gains were small. Crucible was off a point on the initial transaction but soon rallied and in the first sessions that it would cross 250. Some outside buying was reported. The public is said to be returning to the market, which has been decidedly professional for a fortnight or more.

EXPECT EASIER MONEY RATES.

Higher money rates have been a restrictive influence upon speculation so far this week, but belief obtains that the advance will be brief. It was due to large withdrawals from banks of funds required in first of the month settlements, and also to shifting of government balances. Naturally this reduced the amount which could be loaned on call. After today an easier tendency is expected.

American Tobacco was weak in early trading. It was reported that a new company formed by Wheelan-Duke interests, and which will be named the International Trade Mark Corporation, is being formed to take over American Tobacco business. Announcement of the organization details is expected within a few days. Another statement to this effect is that Retail Stores the feature of the opening, nine thousand shares selling a from 114¾ to 117, an advance of 1¾ at the latter figure. It is understood that Retail Stores stockholders will receive rights to subscribe to the stock of the new corporation.

COPPER METAL RESOLD BY SMALL CONSUMERS

The copper market is very dull and small producers are said to be nervous. A phase of the situation is reselling by small consumers and a disposition to cut prices. They vary widely. Prompt deliveries have been made at prices ranging from 21½ cents a pound.

A trade statement from New York says: "Sending of copper here continued with sales of copper in London by Germany a few weeks ago would indicate that Germany needs other things worse than copper."

Cotton Market Opening

New York, Oct. 1.—The cotton market opened easier at a decline of 20 to 30 points. It was influenced by weak cables, fear of further strikes in England and favorable weather in the South. By the end of the twenty minutes the market rallied about 10 points and was about 15 points under yesterday's close. Opening prices were: October, $1.60, off 20; December, $1.30, off 41; January, $1.32, off 32; March, $2.25, off 20; May, $1.30, off 32.

BANKER SAYS WAR FINANCING WAS WISE

In his annual address to members of the American Bankers' Association, which has more than 20,000 members and is holding a convention in St. Louis, President Maddox stated that at the end of June this year the deposits of all banks in this country totalled about $21,000,000,000. As regards war financing, he said:

"When we consider that cost of the war to the United States from April 6, 1917, to June 30, 1919, was $36,167 million dollars and that we issued only 21,476 million dollars of bonds to meet the expenditure, relying upon taxes to make up the difference, a large part of which has already been paid; and that we now hold obligations of our allies for approximately 10 billion which in time will be paid; it would seem that, considering magnitude of our engagements, the war has been most wisely financed and the burden of future governmental requirements can be easily borne."

Cincinnati Fans Wary on Betting—Few Big Wagers but Plenty of Enthusiasm

now, but so far as enthusiasm, crowds and receipts go a new record will be on the books, whenever they come out.

COUNT AS HOMERS.

Hits into the temporary seats erected in left field are to count as home runs. This was decided after a long conference between Managers Moran and Gleason, in which the former held out for hours to have such drives count only as two-baggers. Exactly why the discussion was considered necessary passes comprehension. It is specifically provided in Rule 48, Section 2, of the baseball playing code that "a fair batted ball that goes over the fence or into a stand shall entitle the batsman to a home run unless it should pass out of the ground or into a stand at a less distance than two hundred and thirty-five (235) feet from the home base, in which case the batsman shall be entitled to two bases only."

The temporary stand in question is more than 235 feet from the home plate, which would have settled the question had not those directing the series deemed a little more publicity necessary. It pays to advertise, even though you have to talk a little nonsense to do so.

AROUSES FEELING.

The whole argument tended to produce a sort of an impossible situation, from the standpoint of the sport end, but it exists and will serve to stir up just a little more feeling between the teams. There's plenty of that as it is, the Reds being especially anxious to sink the doubters who have been shouting that the National League was weaker than its junior rival.

Both teams had the customary day before practice, the Alabaster Hose in the morning and the Reds in the afternoon. Both practices were the regulation performance, and at the conclusion the thrilling news was passed out that both teams individually and collectively were in the best possible condition.

NEED SERIES GOLD.

Tuesday was White Sox day at the Latonia race track—the Reds owned it Monday. So now the athletes really need the series gold to break even. They may be champions on the diamond, but the mutuel machines are something else again.

It has been positively announced [illegible] who will pitch the opening game [illegible] Moran has nominated Walter [illegible], while Gleason states that he [illegible] to lead with his ace, Cicotte. [illegible] assured the dear public that [illegible] selected here of a scrap between [illegible] two of the classiest chuckers that baseball season has brought forth. Assures them it, if there isn't one of those last minute changes and Lefty Williams goes in against Slim Sallee.

TICKETS SCARCE.

Tickets out here are scarcer than roses in January, and the speculators are grabbing off plenty of the population's capital. There are more last minute fans present, than ever graced an interleague tilt and money is no object. Hotel rates have sky rocketed along with everything and cots are now being disposed of at former suite rates.

But the temporary inhabitants and the natives are all happy and the real baseball bug, so noticeably missing a year ago, has Cincinnati in its grip. There are seats in the ball yard here for some 32,000 and there is a roped space in front of the right field bleachers for several thousand more can perch.

SEATS OVER STREETS.

They have even extended the flash bleachers out over the streets surrounding the park and the fans who get in that way have to climb over the fence by the ladder route.

If the Moran idea of ground rules goes through, as chances are it will, there will only be a space of some 180 feet out toward centre field where a home run will be possible. Not one in a thousand ordinary flies go far enough toward centre to evade the agile Felsch or the fleet Roush, so it looks as if the Babe Ruth wallops would be very scarce articles in this series.

WORLD SERIES RETURNS AT MECHANICS BUILDING

Mechanics Building should prove an oasis for baseball fans during the world series as it is the only place in the city where the public will have an opportunity to get a detailed report during progress of the games. Benny Oathus, the well known announcer, will read the reports as they are ticked off the leased wires coming direct from Redland to the stage in Mechanics Building. There will also be a board in the centre of the stage on which will be indicated every strike, ball, hit and fielding play. The doors of the building will be opened every afternoon at 2 o'clock.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

Chicago's White Sox dope to win the World's Series in five out of eight games. The extension of the series to nine games gives the Reds three victories and prolongs the struggle, which, in a four out of seven series, the White Sox probably would have won in four out of five—on the dope.

There is one chance for Moran to make the fight hotter and to hold a real chance to win—and that is by outguessing Gleason in selection of pitchers. The dope indicates that the scoring will be more close than has been customary in World's Series that both teams will score in every game played, and in such a series a fortunate pitching of one pitcher against another may change the results.

Beyond the first two games it is practically impossible to predict what pitchers will be used. Therefore, instead of striving to figure the scores of the games, I have been compelled to figure the pitchers and the number of hits and runs each team should get off each opposing pitcher.

TWO FIRST SCORES.

The scores of the first two games—according to the dope, should be:

FIRST GAME.

Chicago (Cicotte).....6 runs 10 hits
Cincinnati (Eller).....3 runs 7 hits

SECOND GAME.

Cincinnati (Reuther).....5 runs 12 hits
Chicago (Williams).....4 runs 7 hits

As the series progresses and it becomes evident which pitchers will be selected I shall dope each game in advance, according to the pitchers who probably will work.

The strategy of the managers in this series will be worth watching. Each, of course, is justified in scientifically his ace to start the series, and it is certain that the second battle will be between left handers. It may be that Moran may switch from Reuter to Sallee after losing the first game, but that, according to the dope, would not alter the result, as the White Sox figure to score only two runs against Sallee in his first attempt to stop them.

The queerest part of the dope lies in the fact that Big Bill James, who probably will not get a chance to work until the series is well advanced, will pitch a remarkable game and beat the Reds, and that Faber, who probably will not get into action until about the same time, figures to check the White Sox and hold them to a low score.

PROBABLE PITCHING ORDER.

With the five out of nine series Gleason has seen and does not attempt to make a sweep of the games by using Cicotte and Williams as often as possible. He must use them to gain the advantage in the first three games and then, with a lead in the series, experiment with his second string pitchers. He will, beyond doubt, give Kerr as soon as Cicotte and Williams gain the lead for him. I figure that Kerr will hook up against Reuther in Dutch's second attempt, and that he will win in a hard-hitting battle.

If such is the case it will put Gleason's team on easy street and Gleason then probably will attempt to save his stars another spell by using Hod Faber. He has been trying to get Faber part of the way back for the last six weeks and Faber has hardly started to return. However, he has had work and in spite of being drubbed rather hard, has retained something of his old control of his spitter. Faber dopes to be driven off the mound, and Loudermilk probably will replace him. Loudermilk ought to hold the Reds well, but the game figures as lost to Chicago.

How Moran will use Ring is rather a puzzle to me. He dopes to work one excellent game against the White Sox and I figure that Mohan also will call him to the aid of Sallee when Sal makes his second try. The second start of Sallee looks disastrous to the Reds, for the Sox, baffled in his first game, figure to hit him hard and often the second time out. It is an odd feature, too, that Williams figures to pitch better in his second try than in his first.

MAY REST TEAM WIN.

At the present time it looks as if Cicotte will open the series, pitch the third game and then rest until the final or semi-final game of the series. However, much depends upon the success of the others. Should Williams get by in his first attempt, then Cicotte would be rested up until the fifth game. Moran probably will use Eller twice and he may even send him the route the third time if the case becomes desperate, but that is not likely. Moran, beyond doubt, will attempt to conserve pitching strength and try to bring his full strength to bear when he thinks the White Sox stars are weakened by work. To do this he must use four pitchers and perhaps five. In fact there is gossip that the Reds are quietly relying upon Fisher to start a surprise game. Fisher, in the past, has worked well against the White Sox and figures to work well again.

This is the first series I ever studied in which no shut-out game is indicated by the figures. In fact it looks as if the scoring will be rather free all the way and the hitting held down by brilliant fielding rather than by pitching, excepting in Cicotte's first two games in which the Reds will be held to extremely low scores.

Now that the figures have settled the result in advance, may the best team win.

BOXING NOTES

The John E. Welsh Post, No. 56, American Legion, will conduct a smoke talk and entertainment at the Commercial A. C. tonight. Bobby Josephs, Paul Doyle, Shaver O'Brien, Johnny Buckley, Gilly Gustin, Frank Wills, Louis Leonard, Arthur Ross, Johnny Marto, Willie Green, Charley Elkins, Sam Bell, Nate Siegal and several other prominent boxers will be on hand to furnish the thrills.

Boxing was the chief sport of our soldiers when in service. Since they received their discharges they have displayed the same keen interest in the gloves game that they showed when trouncing the Germans.

Willie Corbett of Somerville and Freddy Williams, Cambridge boxer, will appear in an eight-round bout at the Commercial Club's show Friday night in place of Sam Bell and Battling Silva.

The two ten-round bouts will be staged as previously announced Johnny Sullivan of South Boston will oppose Tony Viera, who hails from New Bedford, while Johnny Veto of Chelsea will clash with Billy Carney of New Bedford.

A capacity crowd is sure to be on hand when Walter Butler of Revere and Paul Doyle of this city exchange blows in the feature bout of twelve rounds at the Casino A. C. of Lynn tomorrow night. This is the best booking made by Frank Ducey since he took charge of the matchmaking end of the program at the Lynn club.

K. O. Charley Pitkins of the South End will clash with Joe Pelletier of Beverly in the semi-final whirl of eight rounds. Fred Bryson of Malden and Harry Nelson of this city will box six rounds, while George Robins of Roxbury and Young Leonard of Chelsea will also go over the jumps in a six session affair.

JAKE AHEARN TO BOX JOHNNY WILSON

Boys to Meet for Third Time at Fenway A. A. Next Monday Night

By JACK CONWAY.

Young (Jake) Ahearn, South Boston 150-pound boxer, and Johnny Wilson of Charlestown have been signed to meet in a twelve-round bout under the direction of the Fenway A. A. at Mechanics Building next Monday night.

This is the most important booking which could be made by a Boston promoter. There is as much love lost between this pair as there is between an Italian and Austrian.

Ahearn and Wilson have already met twice. The first contest was held at Lawrence and was declared a draw. In the second meeting, which was at the Fenway A. A., Wilson was credited with winning by a knockout in six rounds when, as a matter of fact, he fouled his opponent twice.

The referee for the tussle has not yet been selected. This will probably be done at a conference between the managers of the rival boxers and club officials which will be held the latter part of the week.

Boston boxing fans are shoestring and rag-tag sports, grafters and sure-thing workers, according to Danny Morgan who avoids work by managing Eddie Fitzsimmons, Jack Britton and Battling Levinsky.

Attacked from all sides following the bout between Fitzsimmons and Kloby at Lawrence, Morgan apparently realizes that he is cornered and is now resorting to methods which he believes will once more place him and his meal tickets favorably in the public eye.

In a statement issued in New York to Nat Masterson, Morgan says:

"All there is to that scrap is this: A few shoestring sports in Boston, who are always looking for the best of it, bet their ones and twos on Fitzsimmons and lost and are now hollering for the police. I bet more money on Fitzsimmons than all the rag-tag sports in Boston put together bet on him and have no kick coming.

"Fitzsimmons had Kloby whipped to a frazzle when the alleged foul blow was delivered by him. This was in the sixth round, and when Kloby went down and claimed to have been struck low the referee, Harry Stout, who is one of the squarest and most competent ring arbiters in the country, refused to allow the claim, but called for a doctor to come into the ring and examine Kloby and see if he were really injured.

"Two doctors immediately crawled through the ropes and assisted Kloby to his corner, where they made a careful examination, which required about five minutes' time. At the conclusion of the examination both doctors announced that Kloby was so badly injured he couldn't continue, which left Referee Stout with no other alternative but to allow the foul and disqualified Fitzsimmons.

"Lawrence, as you probably know, is quite a manufacturing city. There are a great many men employed there and they all bet their money on Kloby, who is a great favorite in local sporting circles. These are the men who beat the Boston gang of sure-thing workers out of their money, and it wasn't the first time, either, for them to do that very thing.

"The amusing feature of the squawk that is being let out by the Boston gang of grafters is that they are now saying they knew beforehand the very round Kloby was to win in. If that is so, why did they bet on Fitzsimmons? Why didn't they play Kloby if they knew it was fixed for him to win?

"Nothing has taught me that the worst kicker in the world, when he loses, is the sure-thing gambler. Being a crook himself, he naturally takes everybody else to be a crook. Another thing I want to tell you is this: The show drew about $20,000 and Boston, with all its sure-thing gang, didn't contribute more than $1,000 of the amount. Lawrence and its working class furnished the gate receipts and won whatever money the Fitzsimmons followers lost, and I'm mighty glad of it," said Sir Dante.

HARVARD BUCKS OPEN FIELD PLAYING

Flocks of forward passes went shooting through the Stadium air today when the Harvard second team tried out aerial tactics which Boston College is expected to launch next Saturday's game with the Crimson on Saturday. Coach Jimmy Knox has his dark horses primed for big doings, and the regular eleven feels some too safe opposing Tommy Wales' scrubs.

Harvard diagnoses the prospective Boston College game to be fast and open, with plenty of running plays, shifty passing and good kicking, and is preparing a defence to offset this attack.

FITZ STAR PUNTER.

Captain Fitzpatrick is probably better than any in the East, and equally as good a drop kicker. The opinion at Harvard, however, is that Ralph Horween will hold his own with the Maroon and Old Gold star if not beat him. Both boys are kicking like big leaguers, and the prettiest kind of a duel should result Saturday.

Horween will oppose Fitz also in drop kicking. The Harvard defence for the kickers is being bolstered up and the offensive for blocking opposing boothing sharpened. Both boys kick the Brickley way and will have a chance to prove which one of them does it the better.

BURNHAM MAY PLAY.

Stan Burnham is in fine shape, and the chances are that he will start against B. C. taking Swords' left end place. The scrimmage today and tomorrow will decide the starting halfback, but Burnham got into the scrimmage against the varsity and apparently has the edge.

The teams battled to a tie in a practice game, the varsity scoring a touchdown after a forty-yard rush and the scrubs, after being given the ball on their opponents' five-yard line, returning. Eddie Casey scored the varsity touchdown, prancing around left end for ten yards. Horween and Burnham did some steady line plunging, and Billie Murray had a twenty-yard run towards the score.

TWELVE BOWLING TEAMS IN BANK AND TRUST LEAGUE

Boston Bank and Trust Bowling League, with twelve teams organized, starts its season the night of October 7 with six matches.

Members of the new league are American Trust Company, Citizens' National Bank, Commonwealth Trust Company, Exchange Trust Company, Federal Reserve Bank, First National Bank, Fourth Atlantic National Bank, National Shawmut Bank, Old Colony Trust Company, Merchants' National Bank, State Street Trust Company and International Trust Company.

Lester P. Sherman of the Old Colony Trust Company is president of the new league and Joseph T Stephan of the First National Bank is secretary and treasurer.

FRED WRIGHT LOOKS LIKE WINNER IN PRESS GOLF

With the first round of match play completed in the Boston Press Club championship, the eight remaining players in the first and second divisions were to compete in their second round today on the Wellaston links. On paper it looks as though Fred Wright will come near winning the leg on the trophy donated by the Hanover Theatre Company, as up to date he has shown the best form.

SPECIAL SERIES SERVICE FOR STATE GUARDSMEN

State guardsmen on police duty in Boston will be provided with a special bulletin service during the World Series, which opens in Cincinnati tomorrow. The returns will be posted play by play as they come in over specially leased wires.

PRACTICE GAME FOR N. H. STATE ELEVEN

Durham, N. H., Oct. 1.—A practice game between the varsity and freshmen football teams was scheduled today with a view to developing a new attack for the State game, Saturday.

Dutch Connors, the sensational fullback of the 1917 eleven, was out in uniform. Two years ago he was rated by those who saw him in action as being the best college back in the smaller institutions.

AJAX-KILONIS BOUT SHOULD BE THRILLER

The Ajax-Kilonis match tomorrow night at the Grand Opera House looks like a thriller, judging by the form the Californian showed against Keione and that uncovered by the Greek against Joe Collins last week. Ajax is now in much better form than when he first came East.

DIAMOND TO COACH HARVARD SOCCER TEAM

James Diamond, former varsity star, has been engaged to coach the Harvard varsity soccer team. Practice started today.

COACH SPEARS SEEKS TO DEVELOP GOOD TACKLERS

Hanover, N. H., Oct. 1.—Coach Spears of the Dartmouth football team is paying special attention to tackling and, with a view to improvement in this department, sent the squad through a hard practice session.

Abe Weld, intercollegiate hammer-throw champion, broke into the team lineup for the first time, in Healey's position at tackle.

Shelburne made his first scrimmage appearance at end. During play Jim Robertson made his first field goal of the year, a pretty drop-kick from the 30-yard line.

ONE UPSET IN WOMEN'S TITLE GOLF TOURNEY

Shawnee-on-the-Delaware, Pa., Oct. 1.—Though Miss Elaine Rosenthal's defeat by Mrs. G. Henry Sieben was the only upset in the women's national golf tournament, several of the champions had a close call.

Mrs. Caleb F. Fox, Philadelphia, gave the champion, Miss Alexa Stirling, of Atlanta, a hard battle and was not beaten until the seventeenth green was reached.

SHARPE ORDERS PRACTICE GAME AT YALE

New Haven, Oct. 1.—Head Coach Sharpe of the Yale eleven said today that it was likely that a short practice game would be ordered as direct preparation for the match with the Springfield Y. M. C. A. College, which opens Yale's scheduled games next Saturday. The such game every week is planned by the Yale board of strategy between the first varsity and the first college eleven. Yale's probable lineup against Springfield is as follows:

Left end, Rheinhardt; left tackle, Kirkpatrick; left guard, Acosta; center, Callahan; right guard, Gritt; right tackle, Wallace; right end, Alexander; quarterback, LaRoche; left halfback, Neville; right halfback, Wells, and fullback, Braden.

The shift of John Acosta from centre to guard is regarded as one of the most important playing transfers of the season. The coaches feel that he and Captain Callahan are two of the most valuable members of the squad. Both are natural centre rushes, and the coaches are disinclined to move the captain from his position at snapback. They have tried Acosta at guard once before this season, but found him lacking in scientific details of that position. Yet they have again transferred him and there is hope that the second trial will prove successful. Acosta was captain of the freshman team two seasons ago.

Both Lou Braden and Captain Callahan have returned to the squad after an absence of several days. Braden remained through a fifteen minute scrimmaging session, but Callahan retired at the end of the usual practice.

DREYFUSS CLAIMS CREDIT FOR CINCINNATI VICTORY

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 30.—Barney Dreyfuss says he is the man who won the pennant for the Reds. The owner of the Pittsburgh Pirates made that assertion in a recent fog horning bee. Barney said that last Winter the Reds asked waivers on Jimmy Ring and Walter Reuther, two pitchers who are expected to star in the world's series and who have been big winners in the National League campaign. Dreyfuss, according to the story, refused to waive on either of the Ringers and Cincinnati decided to keep them, but felt no enthusiasm about it. Neither Garry Herrmann nor Pat Moran expected them to come through as they have done.

BROWN SQUAD TUNING UP FOR BOWDOIN GAME

Providence, Oct. 1.—The Brown football squad is hard at work preparing for the Bowdoin game Saturday. While fumbling and lack of timed offensive strength characterized Brown's play in the R. I. State game, the line showed remarkable defensive strength. This line is one of the heaviest on any Brown team for several years, and there is sufficient secondary strength to allow for any injuries.

TUFTS FOOTBALL MEN SHIFTED BY WHELAN

Several changes have been made in the Tufts football team by Carl Whelan. He still is searching for a fast backfield for the open play, but a well knit rush line who can negotiates some experimenting. Bob Abbott and Jack Haggerty took part in the tutoring of the new recruits to the first squad, who were H. Mitchell, Sites, McFadden and Piemacchia.

Mrs. Solomon Says---

(Being the Confessions of the Seven-Hundredth Wife)

By HELEN ROWLAND

Every Man Regarded th a Woman as a Chinese Inscription, Which Must Be Read Backward: and Diogenes, Himself, Scorned to Look for "An Honest Woman!"

MY daughter, wouldst thou disarmhis thy love and keep thy real sentiment a secret from any man?

Yea wouldst thou be unto him a "fascinating mystery"?

Then, I charge thee, do give him not by word or look, but treat him with perfect FRANKNESS.

For every man regardeth a woman as a Chinese inscription, which must be read backward! Lo, he judgeth her by his own deceits, and seeketh for the subtle and devious in all she doeth, letting the perfectly obvious escape him.

Therefore, when she flattereth him openly; when she flirteth audaciously; when she calleth him by his pet name and patteth his shoulder, saying, "Nice boy!" he saith of her:

"Behold, she is a good little Pal! And there is no danger in her!"

Yet many a bachelor hath been blindfolded and led into matrimony by such simple means, when artfulness and subtlety had in nowise availed.

But, of her that droppeth her eyes and sitteth silent in his presence, and letteth him touch but the tips of her fingers, privately beneath the table, he thinketh dark thoughts, saying:

"Aha! She is exceeding deep! I shall beware of her nets!"

She that greeteth his coming with frank rejoicing, and covereth him with welcome and words of delight, and "Oh how—NICE—to—see—you's," shall not be believed; and he shall sigh bitterly, saying:

"Alas, she but followeth and coquetteth with me! She is a flirt!"

But if she keepeth him waiting; while she prompteth, and mocketh him coyly, if she snatcheth away her hand, saying, "Oh, don't!" he saith in his heart:

"Behold, I am irresistible in her sight! Yea, I am IT!"

She that protesteth honestly: "Lo, I shall be an old maid! For no man hath ever PROPOSED to me!" shall excite his mirth and incredulity.

For he shall say:

"If this were true, then would she NEVER confess it."

But she that declareth, "Men are as nothing to me! For I glory in the single life, and NO man shall ever call me his 'Rib' nor rob me of mine independence!" shall cause men to wink privily among themselves.

For, unto a man, language in the mouth of a woman is but the instrument with which she conceaieth her thoughts, the veil which covereth her "real meaning."

She that openeth her vanity-case and repaireth her complexion, shall be called "naive" and "SO frank!" But she that seeketh to hide he iniquities of her toilet table, and to deny the source of girlish color, shall cause them to lift their eyebrows significantly.

She that kisseth but ONE man in all her life, shall never convince him of this. For he shall say, "It is he WAY with all men!"

But she that REFUSETH to kiss but one man, shall be held in high esteem, and none can persuade him against her.

Verily, verily this one way in all the world for any woman to deceive a man is to be perfectly HONEST with him!

So shall she remain a "fascinating mystery" unto him all the days of her life, and he shall cover her with illusions and be happy!

For behold, Diogenes himself GIt not seek to find an HONEST WOMAN, because in his heart he believed there was NO SUCH THING!

CHAPTER LXI.

SAMUEL LEIGHTON was a fond, but not an over-anxious parent.

So he had not formed the habit of sitting up waiting for the return of his daughter when she went out to an evening affair.

But on the night [illegible] Rosemonde he felt unaccountably uneasy about his child. She had looked so pale and had seemed so nervous of late that he almost regretted that he had not insisted on her taking Anne in the car with her. Then, too, he reminded himself that, after all, he knew very little about Smith. And the disappearance of the pendant remained to be explained.

As the evening went on Samuel Leighton found himself a prey to nervousness. It was with an actual effort that he restrained himself from telephoning to the Burnhame to inquire if his daughter had arrived there safely.

"Desires would think I had taken leave of my senses," he scolded himself [illegible]

[illegible] followed him, taking the [illegible] pulled up for her opposite [illegible]

"Now explain to me slowly and carefully," he commanded.

She waited to arrange her thoughts, then, with a glib that surprised him, told him of how she started to bring the old automobile pocket into the house.

I unfastened it with Smith's [illegible] being anything in it, I ran my hand down into the bottom of the thing—and pulled out these! I again showing him the pendant and chain.

Her voice broke. Her father appeared not to notice it.

"But," he asked, "how did they get there? Are you sure Smith was surprised at sight of them?"

"Indeed, he was," she insisted. "He had not even known they were lost."

"Of course not," Leighton mused aloud. "In spite of wagging tongues we have managed to keep the facts from the man we all suspected."

"I never suspected him!" the girl interrupted.

Again her parent appeared not to notice her agitation.

"How do you account for the jewels being in that pocket?" he queried.

"I do not account for it yet," she replied. "But I shall soon. Let me think!"

Pressing her hands to her eyes she sat for a moment. When she looked up, she had found a solution to the problem.

"Norah knew something about this," she said with conviction.

"Norah! Absurd!" Samuel Leighton scoffed.

"Not absurd at all!" she retorted. "It was said she saw Norah reach [illegible] the limousine for something that day before she gave Smith the box. She must have opened the box beforehand, and dropped the pendant into the bag of the car."

For Revenge.

"But what for?" Leighton persisted.

Desiree's face flushed. "To get even with him," she replied in a low tone.

"Ohl" the man said, a light beginning to dawn upon him. "The girl had a 'lf, didn't they? And this was the young woman's original way of punishing her erstwhile admirer, was it? Well, that clear evidently has a code of its own which is incomprehensible to me."

The face before him flushed a deeper crimson. "Smith is not of 'that class' as you call it, Father," Desiree said with dignity.

Lamb Trotters Bordelaise

Scald, scrape and singe twelve lamb feet. Split them underneath through the thickness of the meat their whole length, and remove the pointed hoof bones, leaving the foot whole. Dilute a small handful of flour with cold water in a saucepan able to hold one and a half gallons, and add to it salt, whole pepper, parsley leaves, thyme, bay leaves, cloves, garlic and a carrot cut in four. Put in the feet and let cook for five hours. When done, strain. Fry six shallots colorless in butter, moisten them with red wine, a little brown sauce, brandy and meat glaze. Season with salt and pepper, add the feet, simmer for a while and serve with very little sauce.

Bright orange is a color that promises to be used extensively if one may judge from the popularity it is enjoying at present. A [illegible] hat of this kind was [illegible] a draped turban, and the only relieving note was an odd [illegible] pin that showed its decided beauty to advantage on the bright orange background.

Panne velvet hats untrimmed are on sale in the shops and come in henna, violet, king's blue, myrtle, castor, taupe and black.

THE GRAY HAIR

A Mystery Story of New York Life

AN INTENSELY THRILLING AND SWIFTLY MOVING PLOT

New Master Criminal, Head of the "Society for the Redistribution of Superfluous Wealth," Terrorizes Millionaires

By Arthur Somers Roche.

Whose novels have placed him in the front rank as a writer of detective stories

The Action So Far

John Hastings, multi-millionaire and captain of industry, has employed Robert Allaire, a young lawyer, to do some work for him. A criminal impersonates Allaire and reveals himself as a member of "The Society for the Redistribution of Superfluous Wealth." He threatens Hastings who attempts to summon aid. The visitor shoots him dead and escapes. Arrested later, Allaire proves a perfect alibi. Police Commissioner Blake is puzzled. Meanwhile three other millionaires are slain. Allaire receives a note from the society and talks over his arrest and the letter with Allison Courtney, his fiancee. Blake is replaced by Heenan, a famous detective. Millionaire Tobey is kidnaped by the dread society. Heenan finds the package of supposed protection money to contain only waste paper. The master criminal had bound and gagged Wilkins' chauffeur and escaped with the real cash. Allaire thinks he recognises Courtney driving a suspected taxi.

"WHAT? Eh You, Mr. Courtney? . . . Why—er—nothing of importance. I—I merely wanted to ask you if you hadn't changed your mind about letting me call upon Allison. I—me, sir, for waking you! I——"

He was flushing angrily as he hung up the telephone.

"What did he say?" inquired Blake.

"Said I'd better see a doctor; said that if I didn't know enough not to disturb a tired man for—oh, never mind what he said. The point is, he was at home, and had been at home all morning, and I was sure that's——"

"You'd seen him driving the Wilkins car? That it was he we chased just now?"

Allaire continued to wipe his forehead.

"I could have sworn it was Courtney," he said. "There was something familiar; it's someone—Blake, I think this affair has got upon my nerves. I must be going crazy. When I can suspect the uncle of the girl I'm going to marry, Blake, I think I need a drink."

"I think you do, too," said the ex-commissioner. "After that, we'll telephone Heenan or someone at police headquarters and give them the benefit of what we suspect—that it wasn't Wilkins' chauffeur in the car, and—by George! Allaire, I'll bet the society got the money after all! Else why was this fellow so anxious to avoid us?"

They left the drug store and ordered their chauffeur to drive them to the Martinette. They drew up in front of the hotel and alighted. Their driver clutched Allaire's shoulder.

"Look, boss!" he gasped. "That's the very car we been chasin'!"

The Empty Car

Allaire and Blake stared. The Wilkins touring car was drawn up at the curb—empty.

"Where's the driver of this car?" Allaire demanded of the carriage starter. The bill he pressed into the official's hand was quick reply.

"He went down into the basement bar, sir. He ain't come out."

Without a word, Allaire and Blake dashed down the four steps that led to the basement bar. It was empty save for the bartender and waiter. Allaire spoke to the former.

"Man wearing a chauffeur's uniform been in here?" he asked.

"Light gray uniform?"

Allaire nodded.

"Yes, sir."

The bartender jerked his thumb toward a door.

"Went into the barber shop," he [illegible]

The two men darted through the swinging door into the barber shop.

"A chauffeur wearing a light gray uniform been in here? Where'd he go?" Allaire asked.

A barber looked up from the lathered face of a customer.

"He passed through. Got that door—just a little while ago."

Allaire pushed through this second door, Blake behind him. And just beyond the door, Allaire stopped with a cry of disappointment. There was a sort of basement lobby here, at the foot of the stairs that led to the other. And here, on this stone lobby floor, was a gray chauffeur's suit, tumbled carelessly where the fugitive had shed it. Luck had been with him; the lobby had evidently been deserted for the fraction of a minute necessary for him to doff the clothing that marked him.

And, once again, the murderer was free and clear. For there was little doubt in the minds of Allaire and Blake that the supposed Wilkins chauffeur was the murderer, flis flight from them, Allaire's uncertain recognition of the man, and now this uniform upon the stone flooring! The little doubt resolved into no doubt at all after they had got Heenan on the telephone and told him of their chase.

"We had him," said Allaire gloomily. "If I'd taken a shot at him——"

"Cheer up," said Blake, although there was little cheer in his own manner. "Anyway, now we'll have that little drink. I think we both need it."

Peter Courtney hung up the receiver with a bang.

"Oh, uncle," cried the girl reproachfully, "you didn't give me a chance to say a word to him!"

Courtney gathered his dressing-gown more closely about his attenuated form.

"I shouldn't think you would want to talk to a man in Allaire's condition," he said stiffly.

The girl flushed.

"What do you mean?"

"It's evident enough what I mean! Wasn't his voice enough to tell his state?"

"He was excited," answered the girl, "and he was very anxious to speak with you. At least he wanted to know if you were home."

"I'm glad, then, that I was comfortably forearmed for a bout when you came to my room," he answered icily, "if only to save you the embarrassment of talking with him. You told him that I was tired, didn't you?" She nodded. "And he merely wanted to ask if he might call upon you. When he knows my wishes! And when he also knew that I was tired!"

In a Cold Mood

"Is that what he asked?" inquired the girl, curiously.

"Yes," he snapped the words, and she noticed that he was shaking with anger. "I have no respect for a weakling," he went on. "A man who will resort to drink in time of trouble is a weakling. I am afraid that I made a mistake in sanctioning your engagement to Allaire."

"I don't think you did!" she blazed. "Furthermore, I don't believe Bob has been drinking. And he didn't talk as though he had been drinking. And he wasn't so anxious to speak to you, either. He merely wanted to know if you were in. He was excited, but he probably had good reason."

"What do you mean?"

"Wouldn't you be excited if you'd been through what he's been through? Why, you are excited! You're trembling! The news about Mr. Tobey on top of last night's excitement and all the other things—uncle, you're positively haggard! You ought to go away for a rest. You ought not to stay in town where the awful society—uncle, why don't you leave the city? Go up to your camp in Maine. They'd never think of looking for you there. And—and I'm afraid for you, uncle. Look at Mr. Tobey! Why, last night he refused to contribute, and now—he's gone! And you refused, and some one entered the house. You must go away."

He shook his head.

A Slam at Allaire.

"I'm not afraid. But about Allaire—if he hasn't been drinking he ought to see a doctor. He talked like an idiot."

She grew angry again.

"Uncle, I won't have you talking that way about him. If you'd only not lose your temper and said such abominable things to him. I could have spoken to him and found out what was the matter. Uncle, you're just as worn out and tired as Bob. Won't you leave town until this dreadful society is run to earth?"

"Will you come with me?" he asked.

She colored, but shook her head.

"I can't, uncle. If Boy should need me——"

He flushed, too.

The Awkward Truth

Counsel and witness were gabbing on capitally, for they were both on the same side. Everything was going swimmingly, and the case seemed already won. "Now, will you tell me once more," said counsel suavely, "what exact words used by the plaintiff in the libel you complain of?" "Certainly!" responded the plaintiff. "He said he dafled me to find a bigger liar than I was." "And what did you reply?" inquired counsel. "Why," answered the witness, innocently, "I told him I should go straight off and see my solicitor!"

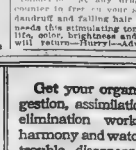
You Just Try NR For That Indigestion

Get your organs of digestion, assimilation and elimination working in harmony and watch your trouble disappear. NR does it or money back.



One Day's Test Proves NR Best

The stomach only partly digests the food we eat. The process is finished in the bowels where the food is mixed with bile from the liver.

It must be plain to any sensible person who realizes this, that the stomach, liver and bowels must work in harmony. Constipation, troubles are to be avoided or overcome. The fact also explains why sufferers from indigestion, also a bad taste and coated tongue, headaches, biliousness and constipation.

If you are one of the many unfortunate persons who cannot eat without suffering afterward, if you are constipated, have bilious spells, headaches, coated tongue, bad breath, variable appetite, are nervous, losing energy and feel your health slipping away, take this advice and get a box of Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) right today and start taking it.

Give it a trial for a week or two and just see how much better you feel. See how quickly your sluggish bowels will become as regular as clock work, how your coated tongue will clear, how good, old-time appetite returns. See how splendidly your food will digest and how your nerves, energy and vigor revive.

Just try it.

You take no risk whatever for Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) is a purely vegetable combination of mother herbs, and if, after the first twenty-five days, and it must help and benefit you to your entire satisfaction, or money is refunded.

Five million boxes are used every year—one million NR Tablets are taken by ailing people every day—there's the best proof of its merits. Nature's Remedy is the best and safest thing you can take for biliousness, constipation, indigestion and similar complaints. It is sold, guaranteed and recommended by your druggist.

Don't Neglect Your Breakfast

The Fear of Indigestion Often Prompts One to Start the Day Wrong. Eat What You Like, Take a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet and You're Safe.

Breakfast offers many of the most tempting dishes of all the things we eat. And yet more people than otherwise go without breakfast save a roll and cup of coffee for fear of indigestion. If you like a fried egg, or some chops, or sausage for breakfast go to it and follow with a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet. You'll have no trouble. The average person who neglects breakfast will be hungry before noon. Most men smoke to kill the appetite, or snatch up something to carry on till lunch time. An empty stomach under these conditions is not starting on right. But on the contrary, is susceptible to many indigestions that may work hardship for the next meal.

It is advisable to eat three good meals a day and digest them. If the stomach seems to be weak, to help it or give it assistance in the natural things to do. Try a good breakfast and follow it with Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet. In a short time soon learn that regularity of meals followed by natural hunger will be appreciated one. You will find Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets on sale at druggists' drug stores throughout the United States and Canada.

OPINIONS VARY ON CONSTANT LOVING

Some Readers Believe Married Couples Should Take Occasional Vacations

Should they lose each other better if they were together less?

Mrs. Josephine Preston Peabody Marks of Boston, mother and poetess, says they would. American readers, what do you think? Write your ideas on the subject, Mrs. Marks says.

"Man or woman cannot spend all their days at interest losing without needing a respite. It is better for married people to take vacations once in a while and go all alone to be with themselves and think. The right kind of love does not burn at fever heat from morn to night. The ever-lastingly married, with their everlasting intrusions upon each other are making the mistake of ignorance."

Do you agree with this? If so, write! If not, write!

Many of the writers agree with an affirmative answer, while others in their replies make a most emphatic denial that a married couple need a vacation from each other.

Some of the letters follow:

ANSWERS IN VERSE

Love Editor, Boston American:

For many years dear One and I Have very happy been,
We've stated alike each birthday eve,
Each, where stood we then,
But love apiary, too, we've had
And shared alike each day,
But all our lives have brighter,
Because, believe God's been near.
Perhaps a week, or may be two,
To visit far off friends and go
And lonely then our heart, and sad,
But when, at last, we step across
The whole wide world to our second God,
To greater we can ever be each
Than could ever be.
Then shall we be always as
The soft breeze stirs the blossoming tree.
The fragrance of our love, dear,
Shall mingle to our onward way,
To have and I have known
Because of times of love's away.

MRS. ETTA J. BAKER,
Dorchester.

DANGERS OF SEPARATION.

Love Editor, Boston American:

Those who are continually self-conscious about their being mated for love keep striving and assuming every possible means to sustain it and actually wear themselves into either an early grave—through separation or divorce.

You ask me if people, on the other hand, take circumstances pertaining to that for granted and are reconciled without apparently suffering themselves.

To those who would practice living less regardless of any period of separation, are in danger of either of two results, perhaps both. Severe restriction or gradual loss of affection and looseness.

Finally in observing most people I find they constantly confronted by living together under their own peculiar rules prescribed from Nature's two most ready chemicals, instinct and intention.

Putnam Conn. J. F. C.

EXPLAINS PSYCHOLOGY.

Love Editor, Boston American:

The difficulty encountered with beings who demand constant attendance from the opposite sex is due to the fact that the proper quality of attraction does not exist between them for it is not generally accepted that human beings are of a dual nature.

That all created human beings possess a higher and a lower consciousness does not always meet with the consideration it should with beings contemplating taking their most decisive step in their career, because this fact of nature has never been revealed to them until they learn this lesson through bitter experience.

It should be the duty of every educational faction all over the civilized world to teach the adolescent the truth of its being and the natural laws governing the same and this alone would remove very great per cent. of unmated couples that discover their mistake when it is too late. Many times a fake pride comes to their rescue and rather than reveal their deficiencies to the general public they endure association against which their whole being revolts.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN OCTOBER 1, 1919 BOSTON

THE GENTLE ART OF MAKING ENEMIES

September 27, 1919.

Editor of the American:

It is shocking to true Americans to see American troops, without authority from Congress and acting under the orders of a Supreme Council of European Powers, engaged in forcibly expelling our friends, the Italians, from Dalmatian territory which they have by solemn treaty and supreme service to the allies and to us the right to occupy.

And not only by signed covenant with the allies have the Italians the right to these Dalmatian ports, but by right of conquest and right of common sense.

These territories formerly belonged to Austria, which Italy was mainly instrumental in defeating; and surely this strip of land along the eastern littoral of the Adriatic should belong to some powerful and progressive nation, in order that it may be led along the path of progress in the forward march of civilization.

The idea that any people are benefited by being divided up into minute independent units is a mistake.

On the contrary, as the union of our colonies into the Federal government of the United States of America has proved, people are benefited by collection into large and powerful organizations.

They are thereby benefited in importance and in strength and in resources and in progress and civilized development.

The ambition of Italy to include Fiume as a part of its national organization is wholly natural, and is more promising of benefit to Fiume, indeed, than to Italy.

The Dalmatian country has been Italian in the past, and in point of speech and custom is largely Italian today.

Its occupation, therefore, by Italy is really much more natural and much more defensible than the occupation by Italy of Botzen and that part of the Tyrol which is essentially Teuton and not Italian.

The occupation of the Tyrol is merely the result of a successful war. The occupation of Dalmatia is a perfectly natural national extension.

The action of D'Annunzio has been heroic and has aroused the sympathy and admiration of Americans. When we consider that D'Annunzio was responsible for projecting Italy into the war on the side of the allies, and when we further consider that that action of Italy in siding with the allies instead of with the Teutons was a determining factor in the early part of the war, we must feel that it is singularly unfortunate that American troops are being used to thwart Italy's ambitions and to deny to her that extension along the Italian littoral of the east coast of the Adriatic which has been her proper purpose for years.

In fact, the action of American troops in this case under orders of a foreign council is merely an example of what we will be called upon to do and what we continually must do if we join this League of Nations drafted by England and advocated by President Wilson.

We will have in every case to bear the brunt of proceedings of this character. We will have to furnish the money. We will have to furnish the men. We will have to do the hard, disagreeable work, and as a result of it all we will make innumerable enemies out of people who otherwise would be our friends.

Italy has always been the sincere friend of the United States. Russia has always been the active and aggressive friend of the United States.

And here we are making war against Russians and making war against Italians for no reason whatever except to please the foreign power which in times past has been our chief enemy and to fall in with its intriguing schemes.

There is not the slightest possible advantage to the United States in all the expenditure of money and employment of military force which we are now called upon to make and which we will be called upon to make under the proposed League of Nations.

There is not one point in all these European intrigues in which we are interested. We are making all these enemies to please other nations.

We are sacrificing our blood and our treasure, the lives of our young men, the resources of our country, to further the plans of England or some other European power.

We are departing from the traditions of the Fathers, from the policies under which we have grown to be the greatest nation in the world, for no reason that can possibly benefit America, but only because President Wilson wants to be an important factor in European politics and a conspicuous figure in the history of the world.

And even then he is making a mistake as far as his own glory is concerned, for he would be a greater figure in the eyes of posterity if he would follow the unselfish course of the truly great Washington and subordinate his personal ambitions to the welfare of his country and his countrymen.

Indeed, D'Annunzio offers a figure which Wilson might well emulate, for D'Annunzio is making his mighty effort for the advantage of his own people and the advancement of his own nation, and is not allowing himself to be used by England as an instrument in one of those treacherous breaches of faith which has well earned for that scheming power the name of "Perfidious Albion."

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

Mr. Wilson's Interference in the Fiume Affair Is Without Warrant

On the 26th of April, 1915, the Italian Ambassador, Marquis Imperiali; the French Ambassador, M. Cambon; the Russian Ambassador, Count Benckendorf, and Sir Edward Grey, British Minister for Foreign Affairs, signed in London a treaty in which Italy agreed to enter the war on the side of the Entente Powers, and Great Britain, France and Russia agreed that when peace was made Italy should have the following territorial accessions, as set forth thus in the treaty:

"Article IV. Under the imminent treaty of peace Italy must receive: The district of Trentino; the entire Southern Tyrol to its natural geographic boundary, the River Brenner; the city and suburbs of Trieste, Goritzia and Gradisca, all of Istria to Quarnero, including Volosca, and the Istrian islands of Cherso and Lussino, and also the smaller islands of Plavinik, Unia, Canidole, Palazzuole, San Pietro del Nembi, Azinello, Grutzo, together with the neighboring islands.

"Article V. In the same manner Italy is to receive the province of Dalmatia in its present form, with the inclusion within its limits on the north of Lissariki and Trebino, and on the south of all lands to a line drawn at Cape Planca to the east along the watershed in such a manner that in the Italian domaine shall be included all the valleys along the rivers flowing into Sebinite, such as Chicolle, Kerka and Butiantizza with all their tributaries. In the same way Italy is to receive all the islands located to the north and west of the shores of Dalmatia, beginning with the islands of Premua, Selva, Ulbo, Skerd, Naon, Pago and Puntadura, and farther to the north, and to Meled on the south, with inclusion therein of the islands of St. Andrew, Buzzi, Issa, Lessino, Tercola, Curzola, Kalse and Lagosta, with all the islands and bluffs belonging to them, as well as Palagozza, but without the islands of great and little Zirona, Bua, Satti, Brazza.

"Article VI. Italy shall receive in full right Valion, the islands of Sasseno and a territory sufficiently extensive to safeguard them in a military way, approximately between the river Voyssa on the north and the east, and to the boundaries of the Schimar district to the south.

"Article VII. On receiving Trentino and Istria in accordance with Article IV., of Dalmatia and the Adriatic islands in accordance with Article V., and the Bay of Valion, Italy is obligated in the event of the formation in Albania of a small autonomous neutralized State not to oppose the possible desire of France, Great Britain and Russia to redistribute among Montenegro, Serbia and Greece parts of the northern and southern districts of Albania. The southern shore of Albania from the boundary of the Italian district of Valona to the Cape of Stilos is subject to neutralization.

"Italy shall have the right to conduct the foreign relations of Albania. In any event Italy obligates herself to leave certain territory sufficiently extensive for Albania, in order that the boundaries of the latter are contiguous on the west from Lake Ochrida to the boundaries of Greece and Serbia.

"Article VIII. Italy is to receive in full right all the islands now occupied by her at Dodekez.

"Article IX. France, Great Britain and Russia in principle recognize the interests of Italy in preserving the political balance in the Mediterranean Sea, and her right to receive on the division of Turkey an equal share with them in the basin of the Mediterranean, and more specifically in that part of it contiguous to the province of Adalia, where Italy had already obtained special rights and has developed certain interests vouchsafed to her by the Italo-British agreement. The zone subject to transfer to the sovereignty of Italy will be more specifically defined in due time, and in correspondence with the vital interests of France and Great Britain. Likewise the interests of Italy must be taken into consideration, even in the event the territorial inviolability of Asiatic Turkey shall be sustained by the Powers for a further period of time, and if only redistribution of spheres of influence is to take place. Should France, Great Britain and Russia, in the course of this present war, occupy certain districts of Asiatic Turkey the entire district adjacent to Adalia and herewith more specifically defined shall remain with Italy, which reserves for itself the right to occupy the same.

"Article X. In Libya all the rights and privileges which prior to this date have been acquired by the Sultan on the basis of the treaty of Lazansk are recognized as belonging to Italy.

"Article XI. Italy shall receive such share of the military contribution as shall correspond to the measure of sacrifice and effort made by her.

"Article XII. Italy joins in a declaration made by France, England and Russia as to leaving Arabia and sacred Mohammedan places in control of an independent Mohammedan Power.

"Article XIII. In the event of expansion of French and English colonial domains in Africa at the expense of Germany, France and Great Britain recognize in principle the Italian right to demand for herself certain compensations in the sense of expansions of her lands in Eritheria, Somaliland, in Libya and colonial districts lying on the boundary with the colonies of France and England.

"Article XIV. England obligates herself to assist Italy immediately to negotiate on the London market on advantageous terms a loan in a sum not less than £50,000,000 sterling."

This treaty was a binding treaty.

Speaking after victory had been achieved, before the peace terms had been settled upon, Mr. Balfour said to the British Parliament:

"The secret treaties must stand. They were the means by which we secured allies to win the war."

The United States was then a neutral. It had no part in making these secret treaties.

When the United States went to war with Germany it did not enter the war as one of the allies.

It made war on its own separate account.

To have been consistent we should have made peace in the same way, withdrawing from Europe when our own national objects had been obtained, and left the European powers to make their own settlements.

But Mr. Wilson insisted upon entangling us in all the negotiations and politics of Europe, and consequently the Italians are right when they assert that in forcibly injecting ourselves into the affairs of Europe and insisting upon taking part in the councils of the allies, we assumed a moral obligation to respect the treaties or stipulations upon which Italy consented to take part in the war.

The curiously illogical thing is that Mr. Wilson fully recognizes Japan's claim to have its secret treaty obligations fulfilled, even at the expense of friendly China, and finds a moral objection to giving Italy what she was promised because the promise was made in secret.

We ourselves are not able to follow such mental processes.

If Japan has a right to Shantung because France and Russia and Great Britain secretly promised Shantung to Japan, then we can see no reason why Italy should be denied the territories promised her because the promise was secretly made by France, Russia and Great Britain.

The plain military facts are that if Italy had remained neutral in 1915, the flower of the Austro-Hungarian army, which had to be assembled on the Italian frontier, would have been thrown with crushing effect upon the Russians, and Hindenburg and his troops, instead of being occupied in the East, would have added their weight to the blows in the West, which came within an inch of being successful as it was, and which would surely have won the war in the Summer of 1915, had they been reinforced by the hundreds of thousands of men held in the East by the Italian attack.

The Italians are not stretching the truth at all when they say that it was their intervention which saved the allies from a quick defeat in the second year of the war.

Now, then, since Italy came into the war upon the definite written promise of the allies to give her the territories which are recited in the treaty stipulations above quoted, France and Great Britain were certainly bound at Paris to support the Italian claims, and we are unable to see by what right Mr. Wilson objected to the fulfillment of these treaty stipulations.

Suppose the treaty stipulations did not fit in with his conception of how Europe should be divided up and made over into an academic League of Nations. What has that to do with the case?

Italy, Russia, France and Great Britain made their treaty while Mr. Wilson was strenuously preaching the duty of the United States to have nothing to do with the war. And the treaty was in full force and Italy had performed her part at an enormous cost, for a nation so poor, during whole years of terrific warfare before Mr. Wilson appeared upon the scene of the European conflict.

As we look at it, Mr. Wilson had no mandate from the American people and no business at all to set himself up as the arbitrator of European affairs, or to preside at the peace conference as the head carver of European territories.

Unfortunately, after we entered the war Mr. Wilson began to see a series of visions which no other American had previously been favored with, and soon brought himself to that exalted frame of mind in which he made himself believe, and tried to make the rest of us believe, that we had gone to war not to protect our rights on the high seas, but to become the guardian stepmother to all Europe and the political wet nurse to two or three dozen little, dinky autonomous states, the very names of most of which the average American had never heard and couldn't pronounce when he saw them in print.

This academic obsession of Mr. Wilson led to months and months of bickerings and disputes at Paris, in which we had neither any right to take part nor any interest in being represented, and has finally resulted in bringing upon America the resentment, the distrust and the openly expressed anger OF NEARLY ALL PEOPLES IN EUROPE.

One year ago, outside of Germany and Austria-Hungary, we had not an enemy in Europe.

Today America would have to rake Europe with a fine comb TO FIND ANY FRIENDS OF AMERICA.

That is because Mr. Wilson played a game in which he had no experience and in which he had no business at all to sit as the representative of the American people—because the American people were not interested in it—and has so bungled the European peace negotiations that no nation except Great Britain is satisfied, and has Italy, Greece, Serbia, Rumania, Russia, Poland, Bohemia, Austria and Hungary all at daggers' points both with each other and with Mr. Wilson's supreme Peace Council, with the final result that more nations are at war with each other than there were in 1914, and the whole of Europe is in a military, political and economic turmoil, which threatens that ancient continent with a cataclysm of revolution and ruin.

Unless Italy is permitted and assisted to stabilize itself and the territories lying along the Adriatic Sea, and unless the other dominant powers upon the continent of Europe are given a free hand to arrange their own affairs and subsequent aid to put themselves on a sound economic footing—including Germany and Russia—distressing times, worse even than war, are ahead of Europe.

And if Europe goes under, politically and economically, it takes no great amount of foresight to see clearly that the impact of Europe's distresses upon our own affairs will be as dangerous as it will be tremendous.

We wish that the Senate would knock out the whole treaty which Mr. Wilson brought back from Europe, order our soldiers out of Europe, cut loose from intervention with all European affairs, quit exasperating France and Italy and the other nations of Europe by unjustifiable and arbitrary interventions with them, and so return to our old and safe policy of minding our own American business.
